ORGAN RECITALS.

Prof. J. J. McClellan Will Reach Home This Evening.

Prof. J. J. McClellan, the Tabernacle organist, who has been in the northwest on a two weeks' vacation, will arrive in this city this evening, and begin tomorrow at 5:10 p. m. the series of Tabernacle organ, recitals for the season of 1906, when the following pro-gram will be observed: Foecata and Fugue in D minor, Bach

MRS. WETZELL'S RECITAL.

Y. M. C. A. Auditorium Crowded for Splendid Musical Function.

The Y. M. C. A. auditorium was crowded, gallery and all, Saturday evening, on the occasion of Mrs. W. A. Wetzell's springtide vocal recital; and the result of the evening made it easily one of the more noted musical func-tions of the season. There was a handsomely dressed audience present, and the enthusiastic interest manifested was evidence that the debulantes are ocial favorites, as well as accomplished vocalists.

Mrs. Charles Daly had a fine command of her clear, high soprano voice, and the clever manner in which she sang the rapid staccato passages in the "Mignon" number showed a careful training creditable both to her and her instructor. Mrs. Daly did spe-cially well in the Lehman number, and has a good stage presence. Miss Rich-ards, the other soprano, was in clear, firm voice, with brilliancy in the upper new voice, with brinning in the upper registers. Her voice is of considerable elasticity, and her powers of expres-sion are good. Two of her songs were written by her brother, Dewey, a New York writer of note, and whose versatillity in song composition is winning him a reputation. The songs were well adapted to Miss Richards' voice. Miss Alice Wolfgang is a contraito who be-fore long ought to have extended repu-tation. She has a massive and sonorous voice, yet melodious and full of sympathy, and with qualities suggestive of the 'cello. In addition, she has an

SHAKESPEARE'S THEORY.

Said Earthquakes Are Caused by Imprisoned Unruly Wind.

Phil Margetts, the veteran Salt Lake ctor, submitted the "News" with the ollowing for 'publication: "Shakespeare On Earthquakes."

There is hardly any branch of hu man knowledge that Shakespeare did not touch upon. It would seem that he was not far behind the scientists of the present day in his theory of the cause of earthquakes. In these earth-quaky times what he says may be ap-propriately quoted. In King Henry IV, act third, secone first, he makes Hotspur, say: Hotspur say: "Diseased nature often times breaks forth in strange eruptions; oft the teeming earth is with a kind of colic pinched and vexed by the imprisoning of unruly wind within her womb which, for enlargement striving, shakes the old bildame earth, and topple down steeples and moss-grown towns,' With all the study given to the subject of earthquakes from the time of Shakespeare to the present to say that they are caused by imprisoned "wind" is probably about as near the truth as say that they are occasioned by th sliding or caving down of portions of the crust of the earth, that they are the result of electrical action, or anything else.

Manager Place of M. & M. A. Hears From Senator Sutherland.

With reference to the transfer of two batteries from Fort Douglas to Fort Russell, and the protest made by the M. & M. A., the following letter was received today from Senator Sutherland by Manager Gordon H. Place:

I have yours of the 12th inst. with reference to the transfer of the two batteries from Fort Douglas to Fort Russell, I called this matter to the attention of the secretary of war and discussed it with him fully more than two months ago. He explained to me at that time that the two hatterles formerly at Fort Russell had been ordered to the Philippines; that Fort Russell was recognized as an artil-lery post, and that it had been the policy to keep a full quota of artillery at that place. Fort Russell consists of 35,00 acres of land, which affords ample room for artillery practise and maneuers. He place. Fort Russell consists of 35,009 acres of land, which affords ample room for artillery practise and maneuvers. He said that if the batteries at Fort Russell had not been ordered to the Philippines the iroops at Fort Douglas would have been sent. Although I have takked with him two or three times since, he has de-clined to interfere with the transfer of these batteries, although he has promisd me that the question of sending infanty or cavairy to Fort Douglas to replace the batteries would be given every considera-tion, and I have every hope that some-thing will be done in the near future. The maiter is not being overlooked at this end, and I can assure you that I shall make every effort possible to procure au order for the transfer of other men to Fort Douglas at the very earliest possi-ble moment. In the meantim, I wish you would notify me promptly when the bat-teries leave Fort Douglas so that I may at that time again chil the attention of the secretary of war to the matter. I was informed at the war department this morning that the batteries had not yet left. GEORGE SUTHERLAND.

IN CUSTOM HOUSE.

The only government department in the San Francisco custom house in which work was continued during the day of the fire was that of Surveyor of the Port Woodward. He and his chief deputy, Chauncey M. St. John, were at their desks by 9 o'clock in the morning and remained there all day. The fire crept up toward them from morning and remained there all day. The fire crept up toward them from the water front and finally was on all four sides of the building. Amid the roar of the conflagration, the crash of falling walls, the excitement attend-ing the work of the 150 Jackies who saved the building, their work went on uninterrupted to St. John, and received further orders regarding their work along the water front. It was a se-vere test but neither the surveyor, his deputy nor his inspectors showed any inclination to abandon their posts until their day's work was done.
