CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Wants Specie Payment—Important Commission, &c.

Sumner called up the bill introduced by him the first day of the session, for the substitution of compound interest for legal tender notes, and addressed the Senate in favor thereof. He said he was for specie payment at the earliest day, and he would support any measure to secure that end. He said inflation was death to business, and contraction was the proper remedy. The substitution proposed by his bill, which was endorsed by prominent business men, and the leading papers east and west, was in the nature of contraction, but without taking a dollar from the people. The present disordered currency owed its origin to Congress. The exigency of war had ceased, and Congress should improve the financial condition of the country. The bill was referred to the financial committee.

A resolution was adopted, giving the Senate committee on transportation leave to sit during the holiday recess.

Dawes offered a resolution, directing the Secretary of the Senate to furnish a history of all the back pay laws ever passed by Congress, including details of the amounts paid under them, &c.

Gordon offered a series of resolutions, prefixed by a long preamble, reciting, in substance, that the abolition of the franking privilege had deprived agricultural tourists of many valuable seeds and much interesting reading, for which deprivations there should be an important reduction of expenditures, and requesting the Postmaster General to report, in detail, what reduction of expenses, if any, said abolition had resulted in.

Howe introduced a bill providing for the appointment by the President, with the consent of the Senate, of five commissioners to investigate the alcoholic liquor traffic in its economic, criminal, moral, and scientific aspects, in connection with pauperism, crime, vice, public health and the general welfare of the people. The commissioners should also inquire and take testimony as to the practice and results of licensing, and of restrictive and prohibitory legislation for the prevention of intemperance in the several States of the Union. The commissioners are to be appointed from civil life, irrespective of political or partisan consideration, to hold office one year, and to serve without pay, except for incidental expenses.

The bill to authorize the organization of national banks without circulation was taken up. Sherman explained that the bill did not confer any privilege except to allow any bank to assume the same as a national bank, and he expressed the hope that it would pass, but after discussion it was laid over, and the Senate went into executive session, and soon adjourned.

HOUSE.

Postal Savings Institutions—Educational Fund—Salary Repeal—Speech by A. H. Stephens.

Beck offered a resolution directing the Postmaster-General to report how many employees of all grades it will require to carry on a postal savings institution, as recommended by him, and that he furnish the like information as to the postal telegraph system, when the same is in full operation. Adopted.

Hoar reported a bill to establish an educational fund, and to apply the proceeds of the sale of public lands to the education of the people. It enacts that the net proceeds of the sales of public lands shall be forever consecrated and set apart for the education of the people, provided the act shall not repeal, impair or suspend any law authorizing pre-emption or homestead entries, nor abridge the power of Congress over the public domain, nor interfere with the granting of bounty lands to the soldiers and sailors of the late war. Without discussion the bill went over till Tuesday next, and the House resumed the consideration of the bill in relation to salaries.

Poland favored his amendment, offered some days ago, to make the compensation of Congressmen five thousand a year, and said it was amply sufficient for him to live upon.

Stephens, of Georgia, was the next speaker. He rose to his feet with some difficulty, and not without the aid of one of the pages, and stood supporting himself with a crutch under his left arm. Many members left their seats and gathered around him, and he was listened to with marked attention. He spoke with a clear ringing voice, which was distinctly audible in every portion of the chamber. His manner was nervous and his remarks very digressive, many of his sentences being incomplete. After speaking of the comments of the press, Stephens said, "The gentleman from New York, Freeman, had spoken yesterday of demagoguism. He, Stephens, maintained that there could be no statesmanship without it. There never had been a statesman who was not a demagogue. There were two kinds of demagogues, the sham and the genuine. The genuine demagogue was the man who led the people, who guided the people; the sham demagogue pandered to the errors and prejudices of the people. He was very glad to say that the increase of salary bill was a measure for which neither political party was responsible. His opinion was that the democracy, in proportion to their votes in Congress, were quite as responsible as the republicans. The first great thing to be learned in this life, as taught in the schools of ancient time, was to discriminate between that which the multitude thought was right and that which was right in itself. He claimed that when Congress passed the retro-active law of last session it had the constitutional right to do so. He was not saying whether it was expedient or not, but no blush should rest on the cheek of any man, whether he voted for it or not he should have felt that he was as justly entitled to it as if he was to receive only a dollar a day. It was a constitutional law, constitutionally passed, and those who received the increased pay were as much entitled to the whole of it as they would have been to only a dime received under the law. If any thought it was too much and received it, he, Stevens, would not cast a slur upon him for doing so. He was not going to place a value on his own services as a representative, but if he were to stake what he thought the services of a Representative ought to be worth he would go far above the figure of any law that had ever been passed. He had given it as his opinion, in the last speech he made in the House, fourteen years ago, that if the salaries of the members of Congress were $10,000, Senators $15,000, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court $50,000, Associate Judges $40,000, and the rest $10,000 it would be better for the country at large. He held the same opinion still. He certainly could not vote for the bill reported by the committee, but he believed the most unwise action of last Congress was the abolition of the franking privilege."

Garfield replied to Stephens, taking particular exceptions to his views as to the propriety of high salaries. He thought the people had decided that the congressional pay was too great and Congress ought to submit to that judgment, though none of the bills presented exactly met his views.

Kasson advocated the minority report, and argued that the majority bill would strengthen that element of personal government which had grown up to a dangerous degree. He criticized the recommendation of the President with regard to erecting mansions in Washington for public officials, and in regard to giving the President the right to veto a portion of a bill. He wanted no principle to be established by the action of the House which would surrender still further legislative dignity and authority.

At 4 p.m. Hale moved the previous question on the third reading of the bill, but the friends of the minority bill and all favoring a more sweeping measure, and all its opponents combined to defeat the motion. The vote was taken standing, and resulted in yeas 100, nays 145.

Orth then proposed to recommit the bill to a select committee, with instructions to report a bill repealing the whole salary act of last Congress as far as could be done under the constitution, and to ascertain the average amount of salary, mileage and all other expenses, exclusive of any estimate for the franking privilege, that was paid to Senators, representatives and delegates in the 41st Congress, and to report a bill to-morrow, fixing the compensation at the amount thus ascertained as nearly as practicable, with the necessary travelling expenses, and restoring all other salaries as they were before the passage of the act.

The Speaker, in answer to a number of inquiries all over the house, explained the parliamentary status of the bill, but without coming to a vote on the proposition the house adjourned.

Significant Internationalist Meeting—Meeting of Republican Committee.

NEW YORK, 11.—A mass meeting of workingmen, under the auspices of the internationalists, was held this evening at the Cooper Institute; Theodore H. Banks, painter, presided. As early as half-past seven the hall was crowded in every part. Several hundred women were present. Telegrams were received from Cleveland and Chicago, wishing success to the meeting. Around the platform were numerous mottoes, such as—"We demand a suspension of rent for three months, "The general that commands this army is general distress," "When workingmen begin to think, monopoly begins to tremble," and others of an equally significant character. A hand bill was circulated, enumerating the high salaries paid to officers, and demanding that no more salaries be paid over $5,000; the number of homeless men and women in the city was given at 10,000; those in the station houses 7,500 every week, and out of eleven trades unions 20,250 men were idle, and only 590 employed. It also stated that there are 180,000 skilled workmen idle in this State, and 11,000 of all classes idle in the city, and 38,000 women earning only an average of $3.44 per week. Addresses were read on the duty of the government to protect the industrial classes, and when a government fails in that duty it should be set aside or overthrown. John H. Albert read a preamble and resolutions, amongst which were the following:

Whereas, we wish to avoid all outrage on the persons or property of any, and deprecate violence and injustice in any form, and we only demand the necessaries of life for ourselves and families, not as objects of charity but as law-abiding citizens, whose right it is to demand these of the government which we have always supported; "Resolved, that we will, in this our time of need, supply our selves and our families with proper shelter and the necessaries of life, and we will send all our bills for the same to the city treasury to be liquidated, until such time as we shall obtain work and pay for our work; that we demand work now, and pay for work, and the abolition of the contract system; that to prevent money panics we demand the enactment of a law that shall limit the accumulation of any individual, that is, a law of graduated taxation, which shall prevent any man or set of men being able to lock up our circulating medium."

The resolutions were adopted, after which numbers of addresses were made, and the meeting adjourned.

The leading lines have decided that on and after Dec. 15, liquor in wood, not otherwise specified, shall be rated as first class freight, and liquor in wood valued at one dollar per gallon, when so stated on the shipping receipt by shippers, as third class.

At a meeting of the liberal republican general committee tonight, resolutions were adopted that in the judgment of the committee the nomination of Williams to be Chief Justice should not be confirmed, and heartily congratulating the country upon the adoption by Congress of the general amnesty bill.

Railroad Convention.

WILMINGTON, N. C., 11.—The convention in the interest of the projected air line railroad from Chicago to Charlestown, assembled at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce this a.m. A large crowd of merchants and bankers were present, including 100 delegates from points along the line.
