ANOTHER "VELVET WINTER."

Some years ago the smartest carriage and calling costumes were of the soft panne and mirror velvets, but a brief reign of satins and crepes displaced the heavier stuffs from favor. Now the velvets are back, but they are much softer and more supple than the old kind. The handsome velvet calling costume usually boasts of a complete frock, topped by a well-cut and somewhat ornamental coat to the knees. Such a suit is shown here, the coat being trimmed with silver and silk embroidery. Such a velvet coat could be worn upon occasions over the little "tea" dresses and matinee frocks of lightweight wool and silk.
