

Warner Answers Mayor Rose On the Liquor Question

ADAM DIXON WARNER.

Adam Dixon Warner, familiarly known on the Pacific coast as "Silver Dick," speaking in this city last Sunday undertook to refute, and succeeded, the almost notoriously famous speech of Mayor Rose of Milwaukee in the defense of the liquor traffic. Mr. Warner's arraignment of the saloon evil was as follows:

It is not with vengeance that I speak against the institutions of evil. I am making this fight against those institutions of evil the saloon and the whisky traffic, and the invasion of the rights and liberties of the people, on the same broad ground that Washington, and Jefferson, and Franklin, and Adams, and Hamilton, and Patrick Henry, and Lloyd Garrison, and Wendell Phillips, and Henry Ward Beecher, and the immortal Lincoln and Grant fought and waged war against that other slavery, to free the human race—upon the broad ground of what Lincoln said was, "the real issue in this country, the eternal struggle between these two principles, right and wrong." They are the two principles that have stood face to face from the beginning of time, and will ever continue to struggle.

The one is the common right of humanity, and the other is the divine right of kings. The one is equal rights and the other special privilege. It is the same principle in whatever shape it develops itself. It is the same spirit that says, "you work and toil and earn bread and I'll eat it." What slavery said, the whisky traffic and the saloon say. "You work and toil and earn bread and we'll eat it." My fight is not against the saloon keeper—he is but an incident of the argument—my quarrel is with the traffic that has dragged down, and is daily dragging down the brightest minds of the nation.

OPPOSE RACE DEVELOPMENT.
I oppose the saloon and the liquor traffic because they are opposing the higher development of the human race. I oppose them because the traffic increased during the last decade 39 per cent, while the population decreased 10 per cent, and the consumption of citizenship increased nearly double what citizenship increased.

I oppose them because wine and whisky took an inch out of the French race in 100 years, and its ravages have increased as the consumption has increased in America. I oppose them because the highest tribunal in the land says that "if loss of revenue should accrue to the United States from a diminished consumption of ardent spirits, she would be a gainer a thousand-fold in health, wealth and happiness of the people."

"It has caused more misery and crime than all other sources."

A REMEDY SUGGESTED.
I have been asked since I have been here my solution of the gambling and street walking. I answer. Hire a new chief of police. At that won't do hire a new mayor. All police power is summary power, and you let the law violator, the gambler, the soldier, the drunkard, and the army of law violators that thrive on non-enforcement of law, understand that the police power is going to be enforced, and you will have to get a special train to take them out of town fast enough. If you don't believe it, make a trip to Los Angeles and ask the present mayor and chief of police. We recall a mayor for refusal to enforce the law, and hire a new chief of police. And today Los Angeles is the model city of America. Now the dens of infamy and gambling halls are closed and the saloon keeper who violates the law loses his license and his place is closed, and the city is clean, and our wives and sisters are safe.

I say official law-violation is the worst kind of law-violation. It is the stigma of degeneracy of government. A Maffesiance in law is the non-enforcement of law are the two greatest evils in civil government.

Official lawlessness is the most intriguing and insidious of civil government. It strikes at the very foundation of government, and is anarchy. The public officer who wilfully betrays his trust is as guilty of treason to his state or his city as was Benedict Arnold, and not until the people hold pub-health, happiness and renewed affection; and how easily it is all done, how simple his language—there is a logic and an eloquence in it that few with human feelings can resist.

"Whether or not the world would be vastly benefited by a total and final banishment from it of all intoxicating drinks seems to me not now an open question. Three-fourths of mankind confess the animosity with their tongues, and I believe that all the rest acknowledge it in their hearts."

"For the man suddenly, or in any other way, to break off from the use of drinks who has indulged in them for a long course of years, and until his appetite for them has grown ten—or a hundredfold—stronger, and more craving than any natural appetite can be, requires a most powerful moral effort. In such an undertaking he needs every moral support and influence that can possibly be brought to his aid and thrown around him. And not only so, but every moral prop should be taken from whatever argument might rise in his mind to lure him to his back-sliding. When he casts his eyes around him, he should be able to see all that he respects, all that he admires, all that he loves, kindly and anxiously pointing him onward, and none beckoning him back to his former miserable wallowing in the mire."

Now, if that is not a sufficient prohibition speech for Mr. Rose, and the brewers and distillers and saloonkeepers and barkeepers and bawdy house-keepers, I don't know what they want. Rose says that he searched through all of the writings, and all that he has seen written about Lincoln, to find where Mr. Lincoln had ever said anything on the subject of prohibition, and leaves the impression, and struggles to create the impression that Lincoln was in favor of the liquor traffic, when, if he had been half as honest as the public as he was zealous for his employers, he would have looked on pages 261, 275, Vol. 1, centennial edition of writings of Lincoln, published in 1905; and on page 275 of the same book, where Mr. Lincoln himself, in a letter to Joshua Speed, says "That his speech was published in the Sanganon Journal." And if Mayor Rose had half looked in the state house in Springfield, Ill., he would have found the Sanganon Journal on file, containing the full speech from which these quotations are extracts.

PERSONAL LIBERTY.
Mayor Rose talks about personal liberty. What becomes of your personal liberty when you disobey your police, health or fire ordinances? His misleading and fallacious "personal liberty" may continue to mislead the ignorant so his clients may further rob them, but his argument is fully answered by the decision of the supreme court of the United States in the case of Crowley vs. Christensen, from my own state, California, decided in 187 U. S. page 87. It is not personal liberty that Mayor Rose is pleading for. It is not more personal liberty that the distiller, brewer and saloonkeeper want, but it is special privilege to make money out of the other fellow's personal liberty. They

SLANDER OF LINCOLN.
I call the bill and a half dollars that came out of the pockets of the wage earners last year, that was earned for bread and clothes and education, but went for whisky and destruction.

I want to call the immortal Lincoln a witness. I want to prove to the people of Salt Lake and the entire United States that Mayor Rose's attempt to bolster up his defense of the saloon and the liquor traffic with the aid of Abraham Lincoln is a base libel and a slander against the name of one of the world's greatest patriots.

I am told that Mr. Rose did here just what he did in Chicago. That he cited House Journal of 1839-40 of the records of the secretary of state of Illinois to create the impression and prove that Lincoln was in favor of the saloon and the liquor traffic.

The fact is that all that record discloses (and I have a transcript of Mr. Rose's statement of the record) that Mr. Lincoln made a motion to lay an amendment on the table. Now Rose knows, and every lawyer, politician and school-boy knows that such a motion could have no other effect than to lay the whole subject matter on the table. And the act was "An act to regulate tavern and grocery licenses." Such a thing as the accused is doing at present day saloon was unknown at that time. The entire traffic was done in the tavern and grocery. Again, Mr. Lincoln at that time was a mere boy, and his experience was somewhat limited.

But three years later, in 1842, listen to what Mr. Lincoln in his Memorial address, before the Springfield Washingtonian Temperance society, Feb. 22, 1842, delivered in the most sober hour of what he believed to be his life, Washington's birthday.

APPLICABLE NOW.
And one would think he was talking of present day conditions. He said: "Although the temperance cause has been in progress for nearly twenty years, it is apparent to all that it is just now being crowned with a degree of success hitherto unparalleled."

"The list of its friends is daily swelled by the additions of fifties, of hundreds and of thousands. The cause itself seems suddenly transformed from a cold abstract theory to a living, breathing, active and powerful chieftain, going forth 'Conquering and to Conquer.' The citadels of his great adversary are daily being stormed and dismantled, his temples and his altars, where the rights of his idolatrous worship have long been performed and where human sacrifices have long been wont to be made, are daily desecrated and deserted. The triumph of the conqueror's fame is sounding from hill to hill, from sea to sea and from land to land, and calling millions to his standard. A blast of glory, when one who has long been known as a victim of intemperance bursts the fetters that have bound him and appears before his neighbor, clothed and in his right mind, a redeemed specimen of long lost humanity, and stands up, with tears of joy trembling in his eyes to tell of the miseries once endured and now to be endured no more forever; of his once naked and starving children, now clad and fed comfortably; of a wife long weighed down by woe, weeping with a broken heart, now restored to want special privilege to make a living out of the money the other fellow has earned for bread.

This is the same argument that the other slaveholders used, Wendell Phillips, Henry Ward Beecher and Abraham Lincoln; and Lincoln answered them "that their slavery was a cancer eating out the vitals of the nation," and he answered them with the proclamation of emancipation.

Mr. Rose asks the business men of the country if the industry does not pay into the treasury $223,000,000, and $41,000,000 in the city treasury. I ask the business men if they would not rather have had that amount spent in the regular channels of trade that did not produce want and hunger; that had to be cared for by the charities of the real business men of the nation? I ask where that $223,000,000 came from? Did it not come out of the toiler and wage earner and deprive their wives and children of the necessities of life? That should have been bought from the real business man through the regular channels of trade? I ask if that vast sum and the billion and a half more that the traffic took from the wives and children of the nation and gave absolutely nothing in return but sorrow, want and death, had not been spent for booze, would it not have been spent for homes and food, for bread, more bread, groceries, meat, wool, cotton, leather, furniture, carpets and all the necessities of life?

THE TOLL.
There were 200,000 prisoners, 200,000 insane and 2,000,000 in the work houses and reformatories that had to be cared for by the business men. How? Either by taxation or through your charity or both? I don't want to destroy business. I want to make business, but I want to make a business that makes character.
