The question "In which part of the body is the soul located?" has been revived among metaphysiclans. Some say it is in the brain. others in the heart. The Latterday Saints say that the spirit of man dwells in the entile body, or in ering to the spirit, revealing its shape and form to those faculties commonly called the senses. But if the spirit of man is immaterial, as claimed by the learned by the l be located anywhere? It is quite immaterial where or what it is if it pretations is common even in the classes. He complains of caselessness in this respect in every State in the Union, and proposes as a remedy what might be called a supplementary or preliminary Legislature, "to consider all projects for public laws, and give audience to all persons who wish to be heard for or against such measures," and then draft bills for the Legislature to adopt. There are many objections to this which we shall not stop to discuss, and also to the suggestion by others who perceive the evils of loose legislation, of the employment of trained experts to frame bills for passage by legislative bodies. Lawyers are not always the best kind of man to discuss, and also to the suggestion always the best kind of men to make laws, for their business is in a great degree dependent on double meanings and the possibility of opposite renderings. But we merely wish to show that what is complained of as something peculiar to Utah is common all over the land, and we are of the strong opinion that no body of legislators could be organizthat in a Utah court would be imfair and capable judicial tribunal without prejudice and without par
