A VILLAINOUS ATTACK.

THE Salt Lake Tribune of yesterday morning contains an article on "Character Assassination," much of which is fairly grounded, but the sensible streaks are at grotesque variance with other sentiments expressed in the same connection. But the strongest difference lies between the more consistent statements of the article and the general course of the paper, as exhibited even in the same issue, which contains a virulent, inexcusable attack upon Hon. Joseph F. Smith, under the head of "Apostolic Gall." It accuses that respected gentleman of duplicity and dishonesty of the most contemptible type

It is pos ible for people who are not acquainted with the gentleman to be misled by this base and cowardly assault upon his character, but those who have even a limited knowledge of him know him to be the very soul of honor in his dealings with his fellowmen.

We do not pretend to say that we know who either wrote or inspired that article, but it amounts to a moral certainty. We have not the slightest doubt that its original source at least was the unutterably contemptible and diabolically mean person concerning whom certain reputable members of the bar recently testified to the effect that they would not "Believe him under oath," and who is said to be guilty of nearly every crime in the , catalogue. It is a moral certainty that the same degraded and petty soul set fire to the barn of the honorable gentleman, who is now so venomously attacked, while he was absent in Europe several years ago. At the time of the occurrence we expressed our belief, to his face, that he did the dastardly deed from unadulterated spite, and he beat around the stump without denying his guilt. Like this act of fiendish incendiarism, this new stab in the back is delivered during the temporary absence of the person at whom it is aimed.

We do not wish to be understood as asserting that the disreputable individual to whom we refer wrote that virulent screed, for it may have been West. penned by a diluted edition of him-
