A. C. PROFESSORS HOLD INSTITUTES.

Tour of Sanpete and Sevier Counties by State Farmers' Institute Committees.

NINE TOWNS HOLD SESSIONS.

Permanent Town and County Organizations Effected—Improved Methods of Farming the Watchword.

(Special to the "News.")
Richfield, Sevier Co., March 4.—A very successful farmers' institute tour, under the auspices of the State Farmers' institute committee, was made through Sanpete and Sevier counties during the week from Feb. 26 to March 3, by Profs. Yoder, Jensen and Clark of the Agricultural college. Twelve sessions were held in nine of the towns of these counties, viz., in Moroni, Spring City, Fairview, Mt. Pleasant, Ephraim, Salina, Monroe, Elsinore and Richfield.

FARMERS' ORGANIZATIONS.
Local organizations, where not already in existence, were effected. The local organizations of north Sanpete county towns joined together to form a general organization to be known as the North Sanpete Farmers' institute. A similar organization was formed by the various towns of Sevier county. In each case the local organizations become sub-organizations of the general organization, and the presidents of the former are vice presidents of the latter. The purpose of these organizations as specified in a very general way in the constitutions which they adopted, shall be to promote in every way practicable, the agricultural interests of the respective localities, to cooperate with the State Farmers' institute committee in bringing before the farmers of that community such information as may be considered of interest and benefit, and to these ends to conduct regular and special meetings, and to transact such other business as shall be consistent with the aforesaid interests as may from time to time be determined. In some localities a strong sentiment was expressed by the citizens in favor of combined action for the most advantageous marketing of products and purchasing of supplies. It is possible that these organizations or sub-organizations arising from them will accomplish much for the agricultural interests in this line.

INTEREST IN MEETINGS.
The interest manifested in these meetings in all the subjects discussed speaks well for the future of the agricultural pursuits. A spirit of independence from established customs and a desire to arrive at improved methods of handling the soil, the stock and the crops which was manifested is most commendable.

FARMING AS A BUSINESS.
In his address at these meetings, Dr. Yoder usually dealt with the general subject of farming as a business. He emphasized the fact that while there is much to be said along sentimental lines about the freedom, independence, healthfulness, honorableness, etc., of agricultural pursuits, it is the business side of farming that the farmers' institute, the Agricultural colleges and the experiment stations should primarily improve. It is primarily a question of how the farm may be made to pay the highest rate of interest on the investment. He showed how the returns from the farm are limited by various factors, as the quality of ground, the sunshine, the moisture available, the fertility of the soil, the nature of the crops, the method of transportation and market conditions, and the ability of the manager, giving most of his attention to the subject of soil fertility, showing the danger in neglecting this important matter in farming, and urging the production and use of stable manure and a rotation of crops including legumes in the rotation. As special occasions suggested the need of it and time permitted he also touched on the economical use of moisture under irrigation or dry farming, better road building, the importance of thoughtful planning and preparation for future business, and the attraction and opportunities for the active young man in agriculture.

DAIRYING AND BREEDING.
Prof. Clark talked mostly on dairying and horse breeding but at times touched also on the feeding of sheep and swine and on the conservation of fertility of the farm by combining stock raising with field cropping. The very practical thoughts that he dropped all along the line of his subject never failed to interest the hearers and elicit questions. In speaking of dairying he stressed the importance of selecting one of the dairy breeds and breeding for performance and pure blood. He mentioned the great difference between the individuals of the same breed and urged the importance of weighing and testing the milk from each of their cows, and always to sell the least productive. His quotations of figures from actual experiments conducted by the Utah experiment station showed forcibly that there is much profit in the business under market conditions. With reference to horse breeding he also urged the importance of sticking to one breed and breeding up, always, however, having due regard to quality as well as size. He urged that in the purchasing of stallions the buyer should be guided by the best price, and that this could only be accomplished better by dealing directly with the breeder.

CARE OF MACHINERY.
The subjects dealt with by Prof. Jensen were "Organization of Farmers," and "Care of Farm Machinery." He urged the importance of concerted action in the production of uniform crops of good quality, properly grading them before marketing, and sending them to the best markets in large lots. He called attention to the great waste of capital occasioned by allowing valuable farm machinery to stand out in the weather. Experiments show that sticks of wood left in the weather a single winter deteriorated so as to be only three-fourths as strong as a similar stick kept indoors. Metal parts of machinery also suffer deterioration when left in the rain and snow. The delicate bearings are especially subject to injury in this way. He also urged the importance of keeping all machinery in good repair, well painted, bearings lubricated properly, and hand tools in their proper places.

Two sessions were held at Moroni, Monroe and Richfield, and one session only at each of the other places mentioned. The audience was usually made up of the most wide awake, active farmers. At Mt. Pleasant and Monroe many ladies and young people were in attendance.

The outlook for a very successful season for the farmers in these two counties is bright. The supply of snow in the mountains is very promising.
