READY TO DO BUSINESS NOW

if Court Decides Against Spalding it Will Throw Magnates Into Another Bad Muddle.

New York, Dec. 18 .- The World says: t became known yesterday that a baseball club has already been organized in this city, ready to do business at once. The organization was completed last Sunday, presumably just before Spalding made the public announcement that Freedman would be out of baseball in the near future. It is said that the new club has an option on a convenient plot of ground suitable for baseball playing. The American league has already obtained the New York club's best players. Should the courts decide that A. G. Spalding was not legally elected president of the league, it will merely put the magnates back to where they were last Fridayin the Fifth Avenue hotel with a deadlock vote of four to four, Ban Johnson, president of the American league is ex-pected here tomorrow or Friday.

PENSIONING OF VETERAN CLERKS

Proposition to Retire Old Employes Is Gaining Strength.

PLANS TO CREATE A FUND.

Aged and Infirm Men a Detriment to Government Service-Pure Food Legislation.

Washington, Dec.-The proposition to retire the aged and superannuated employes in the Washington departments eceives more encouragement year afer year as the friends of the measure keep pushing forward their arguments in its favor. The proposition is to create a fund by assessing all clerks a small fraction of their salaries, to be devoted to pensioning the old and useless clerks. At first thought the proposition seems rather unjust to take money from one man to support another who has not made provision for the rainy day, and many clerks look upon it in that light. The strongest card yet played by the promoters of the scheme is one to the effect that if such a fund is created the retirement will be from the higher grades and thus will be from the higher grades and thus create vacancies, so that all clerks will be promoted. This is met by those opposing the measure by saying that the superannuated clerks have already been reduced to the lower grades and are maintained simply through kind heartedness of the heads of departments. To a large extent this is true, but what is absolutely true is that the number of aged and infirm are increasing rapilly, and the government creasing rapidly, and the government service suffers thereby.

TO PREVENT FOOD ADULTERA-

There is some prospect that in this Congress some progress may be made in the direction of pure food legislation. I make this assertion because I note that Representative Hepburn Iowa has taken the matter up, intro-duced a bill and had it referred to his committee on interstant and foreign commerce. Now Pete Hepburn is a man who does things. He occasionally citses the shadow of reformation of the House rules, but not for any length of time. But when he goes after a piece of legislation, he is inclined to stick by it until he wins. Heretofore the pure food bills have been handled by the agricultural committee. I don't mean to intimate that these commit-tees have failed to do everything possible, but their legislation was of a different character from that by Mr. Hepburn, who proposes to stop inter-state traffic in adulterated foods, beverages, drugs, candles, etc. The in-dustrial commission investigated adulteration very thoroughly and will furnish any quantity of ammunition to those who want to fight it. I am in-clined to think that Mr. Hepburn is up against a hard proposition, know that the adulteration interests are powerful when they once get start-ed. A head on collision between these interests and Pete Hepburn promises to be one of the interesting features of

A BACK NUMBER. Jas. B. Belford of Colorado appeared in Washington a short time ago and was warmly greeted by those who knew him formerly as a most jovial and able member of the House from the centennial state. In his congressional days he was known as the "Red Rooster of the Rockies." I asked Senator Burrows, who was a member of the House at that time, how he came to redeive that sobriquet, and he told me.
"Well," he said, "Jim Belford was a "Well," he said, "Jim Belford was a mighty good fellow, He was redheaded, and he came from the Rockies, but, more than that, he had a voice like a Comanche Indian and would use it like one when there was anything up in which he was interested. He would swoop down the middle alsle, his arms waying like a pair of wings and his waving like a pair of wings and his voice going like a calliope. Some of you newspaper fellows characterized him as the 'Red Rooster of the Rockies,' and it has stuck by him ever since. But they all liked Jim Belford, just

THE WEST IS FOR HIM.

Theodore Roosevelt was a popular man in the West before he became President, but if his popularity in that section now is correctly voiced by the senators and representatives in Con-gress that whole section must be for him. Republicans, Democrats, Populists and silver men, representing the states of the arid land region, are enstates of the arid land region, are enthusiastic in the praises of the chief executive. "The first President that ever gave us the attention we deserved." is the way they talk about him. "Oh, we are going to get an irrigation bill this Congress, sure," they say. "Why, Roosevelt is with us, and that means a great deal." And as they go on each and all believe that with Roosevelt they are going to win a contest they have been fighting for years.

While all our Mexican colonies are prosperous, with abundant crops, and increasing population, this place—Colonia Dubian— has a specially bright outlook. Ten years ago a few settlers made their homes here, and in usual "Mormon" style built houses, planted fruit and shade trees and made valuable improvements and this upon lands for which they had no title, as it was owned by persons living in the United cessary to our people and while unable, cossary to ur people and while unable. cessary to our people and while unable, cessary to ur people and while unable, year after year, to obtain a legal title to the land, the people had an abiding faith in the outcome and continued unceasingly to build and improve, erecting fine brick residences and many comfortable homes. There are today several fine residences that would be a credit to Salt Lake City. Many thought these people very unwise, but the result has proved the contrary. President A. W. Ivins recently succeeded in obtaining these lands, 78,000 acres, during his recent visit to Cleveland, Ohio, and now their development will be and now their development will be pushed with increased vigor. Engin-eer James H. Martineau is now engageer James H. Martineau is now engaged in laying out several thousand acres in city lots, and a large acreage in farm lots, leaving many thousand acres of fine grazing land.

It seems as if Providence specially prepared and reserved this land for our people, for not more than four or five miles from the town are several natural depressions near the foothilis-natural reservoirs-which only need a canal to connect them with the river to fill them in time of flood, to make them of vast utility. These reservoir depressions are of great capacity, which may be doubled by a comparatively small outlay of labor. The lower boundaries of these hollows being solid rock, there can be no danger of their bursting, Johnstown fashion, with destruction of life and property. It seems strange that the idea of utilizing these reservoir sites and the fine lands under them never occurred to the Mexicans who for 200 ears have dwelt in this great valley but they are naturally conservative and content to live as their fathers have done. It is intended soon to commence the construction of a canal about seven miles long to connect these hollows with the river.

In addition to this, Mr. Joseph James

In addition to this, Mr. Joseph James has obtained a concession from the government for the right to erect a dam and electric plant in the Casas Grandes river a few miles above this place, which will supply light and power to Dublan, Nueva Casas Grandes (the railroad town and station) old Casas Grandes and Juarez—a great step in advance. Mr. James first tried to enlist aid in Casas Grandes but in vain. The Mexicans could see no profit in it, though now they doubtless see their error.

The Dublan Co-operative store, under The Dubian Co-operative store, under the intelligent, management of Mr. H. E. Bowman, is doing a heavy business, increasing so rapidly that it is intended to establish a wholesale department here. Merchants in the surrounding towns have hitherto bought supplies in El Passo or Mexico City. in El Paso, or Mexico City, but a wholesale house here will enable them to replenish their stock of goods more easily and quickly, avoiding the de-lays usual in the custom house and expensive rallway fare. Dubian seems the natural point of distribution for all this part of Chihuahua, for Diaz, La Ascencion, Corallitos, Casas Grandes, El Valle Galcana, Guadelupe, San Jose, Juarez, our mountain colonies and the rich mining districts at Guaynopa and Guaynopeta.

This colony has an ideal location and climate, well water pure and abundant, with railway and telegraph facilities.

The summers here are no warmer than in Salt Lake City, and winters are not nearly so cold. This is owing to alti-tude, which here is nearly 5,000 feet. As to farm products the success of a resident, Mr. Walker, is significant; he raised this year 12,000 pounds of sweet potatoes upon a little less than one acre of land. Who that is willing to labor need go hungry here! Why should any live from "hand to mouth"

But not alone is Dublan desirable Our other colonies have each their special advantages. Oaxaca and More-los, in Senora, have a climate about as warm as the Gila towns in Arizona. and can produce two crops a year upor the same land. Pachus, Garcia and Chuichupa are cooler, like Cache, Bear Lake and Wasatch counties, but not nearly so cold, and unexcelled for health, pure water, stock and dairy ourposes, and the usual Utah products of grain, roots, etc. Last, but not least by any means, we have not in any colony a saloon, nor has the writer ever seen a drunken man or heard the name of Deity pro-faned here. Such evils may and doubt-faned here. Such evils may and doubt-less do exist among us, but if so, they are not witnessed in our streets.

We have excellent day and Sunday schools, filled to overflowing, and so, while we have inconveniences incident to new settlements, we find it a good place to raise and train up our children free from some evils found in older places, and are well satisfied to be here. Truly has the blessing of the Lord been upon us and will continue Lord been upon us and will continue so long as we do not pollute our in-heritances by evil doing.

The brethren and sisters expressed

The brethren and sisters expressed their willingness to try and magnify these callings and were set apart accordingly. The evening meeting commenced at 7 o'clock, about 250 being present, and the visiting brethren delivered interesting discourses on the doctrines believed in by the Latter-day Saints, and showing the need of Apostles, Prophets. Pastors, etc., in our day, to feed the bread of life, Baptism was also explained from the Bible. The people here who are not of us are beginning to see that we are not the people we are represented to be, and some are wishing for more "Mormons" some are wishing for more "Mormons" to come in. We look for more in the spring to swell our numbers, and the cry will be "Give us room that we may dwell."

Our president has promised to visit us again shortly and we may have some missionaries appointed to travel and labor in our midst, as there are some who wish to investigate the truth.
