"GO TO THE MILLS."

Eight years ago I was foreman in the Oquirrh powder works.
It was a dangerous position, and not altogether as pleasant as it might have been. But the salary was larger than I could obtain in any other place that then, and this, in a small town, was a considerable thing. I was a foreman and a little later to support was no mean object. Besides I hoped at no very distant day to have a home of my own, founded upon the gift of my employer, the Oquirrh Powder Works.
This dream of happiness in the future was later contented with my life. I was willing to work for a foreman that would share with me.

We were to be married in November, and as the time drew near an intense desire came to me to escape from the monotonous, dangerous existence I led in the mills. A few weeks would make no difference to my employers, I thought, and so when I gave my notice I expected I gave it for the 15th of September instead of November, as I had first intended.

My employers were very sorry to part with me, and they offered to raise my salary, but I had decided and was not to be turned from my decision. The last day of my stay passed quietly enough, and at night I left the dark buildings behind me with a thrill of relief.

That was a happy evening. Marion had been spending the afternoon with my mother, and I had walked home with her, and it was near midnight when I got home. Soon after I fell asleep, but my rest was troubled. I supposed I must have been dreaming, but it seemed a vivid reality to me then.

I was standing in the thick forest which surrounded the works, at the very point where the path to the village diverged and led over the hill and through the field to the mills. It was a wild, dreary path, for it was necessary that the mills should be removed as far from any human habitation as possible, and there was no road leading from the village of Oquirrh to the mills.

There was a struggle in my mind. I thought I could not decide which path to take—the one leading into the distant village or the one leading to the mills.
While I was sitting I heard a voice, clear, solemn and strong, that seemed to come from the ends of the earth, and it said:

"Go to the mill! Your work is not yet finished."
The moon was shining dimly in the sky, the great arc of the dome moved slowly to and fro in the night wind, and a lonely cry echoed in the woods. I lay down again, thinking of little but my dream, and to my surprise it was only a dream, and shortly after fell asleep.

Again, as that vision repeated with singular, mysterious circumstances for circumstances, and again I awoke. I thought it extremely remarkable that I should dream twice on the same matter, but explained it to myself that I had been thinking so much of my departure from the mills. It was a coincidence, nothing more, I said, and turning over I went to my consciousness.

For the third time that haunted dream visited me, and this repetition was almost frightfully vivid. Remembering about it how so strongly the assurance of reality that I started up covered with cold perspiration.

The moon had gone down, the dawn was breaking in the east and gray.
I am not superstitious, and I will confess that an involuntary shudder crept over me when I recalled what I had seen.
I tried to shake off the spell that was in my mind, but in vain; it was as if I had dreamed what I had to do in reality.

about the city people, and a neighbor there was not completely without a visit to the powder mills.
I went out to meet this party and to meet them in changing their shoes and garments. They were looking at me with a mixture of surprise and interest, and I felt that I was being judged.
I called to my neighbor, Mr. Greene, and said to him in a subdued voice, "I am going to the mills."

"You are going to the mills, do you not?"
"Yes, for a few weeks only. We will leave the first of February. Papa has been thinking of going to the mills for some years and he wishes me to go with him."

The loss of flesh is a trifle.
You think you need not mind it.
But, if you go on losing for some time or lose a good deal in a short time, you are running down. Is that a trifle?

Get back to your healthy weight and generally you get back to health.
A book on CAREFUL LIV-
