Revised Regulations Respeting The Duties of Drivers-Vehicles Must Carry Lights.

An entirely new ordinance relating to telephone license was presented to the city council last night, its sponsor being Councilman Stewart. It provides that each telephone company operating here give 50 free 'phones to the municipality, pay a license of $1 per annum on instruments renting at $60 a year or more and 50 cents under that amount.

soo a year of more and to construct that amount. Mr. Stewart endeavored to have his measure passed without delay, but a motion prevailed to lay over for one week. The present contract between the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company and the city will expire Oct. I, in accordance with provisions of a resolution presented by Mr. Black. A considerable amount of routine work was gone through with, after which the council adjourned to wit-neast moving pictures of the Gans-Nel-son fight. Following are some of the matters disposed of: Chief Glore of the fire department was authorized to buy five horses for fire service, at a cost not to exceed

The license committee will act in the pre-mises. Chief Pitt named M. J. Cow-ley as a special policeman at the Rio Grande depot, to take the place of Frank Smith, and the appointment was confirmed, as was also the appointment of Watchman James Monroe, at the O. S. Owing to the fact that the entries for draft horses are ex-ceeding all, expectations and the num-ber of speedy animals due to appear in the daily races is making things inter-esting for Supervisor Lester D. the act boards the train. * ** Grand—"Under Two Flags." this week's bill at the Grand, was witnessed last evening by an audience not large, but thoroughly appreciative. The play is a dramatization of the best of the many productions of Ouida, and is an intensely interesting story of French army life in Algiers. The principal male character is a young Englishman, who, suffering for the wrongdeings of another, is found fighting under a for-eign flag. His, however, is not the leading role, and though valorous are his deeds, he is not the leading soldier. Both distinctions fall to a girl, a waif of the army, who knows no other name than "Cigarette." In the heat of bat-the she is at the front, leading where none but the bravest dare follow; when the rain of shot and shell is over, she is found ministering to the wounded and dying, and finally gives her own life for the man she loves. The part was very well played by Miss Virginia Keating. She filled every requirement of the role in a manner that easily won the honors of the evening. The character was entirely different from anything assumed by her here, but gave her better opportunity than any, excepting, perhaps, the bill of last week. The play runs through the week and ends the engagement of the present company. company.

Lyric—The bill at the Lycic this week is one of unusual merit, and is attracting large crowds, the patrans sceming to enjoy the various numbers thoroughly. Many of the visiting dele-gates and politicians were noticed among the auditors last night among the auditors last night.

Auditorium—Manager Schumach-er of the Auditorium dancing pavillon has discovered a rather unique method of polishing and resurfacing a floor. Not having an electric machine, he se-cured a horse and a large block of wood. To the wood he attached lay-ers of sandpaper. The horse's hoofs were wrapped in soft cloth so they re-sembled huge boxing gloves. The horse was hitched to the block of wood and the polisher had a couple of hours' sleigh-riding. The result was entirely satisfactory. satisfactory.

It can hardly be said there is any virtue whatever in getting drunk, but if James Barry had not been in an intoxicated condition last night when he fell from a third-story landing of a fire escape to the second it is quite probable he would have been killed. But, if he had been in his sober senses as he should have been he would not have fallen. Barry fell from the third story to the second story, got up, looked around him and then tumbled back-

After laying him gently on the bed, the friends locked the door and departed. The scheme did not exactly suit Bar-ry and when he found the door, was locked, opened the window, climbed out onto the fire escape landing and then fell. He struck the second-story landing with a resounding whack, but Barry cared little for the fall. He was a bit surprised and looked about him in a dazed sort of way. A number of persons saw him fall and yelled to him to remain on the landing until assistpersons saw him fall and yelled to him to remain on the landing until assist-ance could be rendered him. He scorned assistance and the next instant felt backward through a window into the kitchen of Mrs. F. A. McArthur.
