TAFT IS PLEASED WITH HIS REVIEW

Compliments Colonel Scott for Appearance of Troops At the Fort.

CANNONS VOICE SALUTE

First Review President Has Witnessed Since Becoming Commander-in-Chief.

"This is the first review I have and it is the finest I have ever seen."-President Taff to Col. Scott.

The first formal event in the pregram of President Tart's visit to Sait Lake presented a spectacle of inspir ing interest that but few of the thou sands gathered at Fort Douglas had witnessed before. It was the president's review, an occasion in which even the president, as commander-in-chief of the army, seldom participates.

The reception of President Tatt at the military fort, and his review of the troops, was held under the most propitious conditions. The day was ideal, the filmy baze of the evening as it spread away and lost itself in the gray hills giving added enchantment to the wide distance of the valley be-The western sky, with flecked and rolling banks of clouds, was bath-ed in the gold of the setting sun, and here and there the waters of the great lake were caught in the silver

From the moment the president's car sped across the reservation line, and the camon belched out their thundering salute, the whole affair became a stage setting. For hours before the appointed time for the arrival of the president, two street car lines had been taxed to handle the crowds that flocked to the post. All afternoon the sightseers swarmed in and around the fort, scurrying over the lawns, the pathways and the parade grounds, resiless in the anxiety to be sure of the best vantage point. The driveways had a constant procession of automobiles From the moment the president's car a constant procession of automobiles and vehicles, and these before the beginning of the review half encircled the great area of the parade field.

After completing the regimental formation on the upper parade ground, the Fifteenth infantry was formed into line extending in double rank along line extending in double rank along the main driveway at the fort, the center of the regiment fronting the quarters of the commanding officer, Col. Walter Scott.

CROWD HELD IN CHECK.

With the eager and constantly surging crowd held back by the guards, there was then a wait of half an hour, with all eyes constantly shifting in the direction of the Iliah battery, whose position in the distance and just over the brow of the hill could only be told by its red guiden.

Almost as a cloud of dust was seen to use from the roadway there was a puff of smoke and the dull boom of the first gun of 21, and a great thrill went through the expectant walters.

the first gun of 21, and a great thrill went through the expectant waiters. The president had come. Sharp words of command, shuffling of feet and the clatter and snap of the strapped guns drowned the murmur that ran through the crowd, "Here comes Taft," and in the same minute the president's car whirled around the bend in the driveway. With the command. "Present whirled around the bend in the drive-way. With the command, "Present arms!" 800 guns went into position as if moved by one man, and the regiment was giving its salute to the president. When the president's car reached the position of Colonel Scott and his aldes, the exchange of salutes was rendered and the president alighted to great Colonel Scott.

While the regiment moved to and took up its position on the lower parade ground for the review. President Tait rested in Col. Scott's quarters.

REVIEW BEGUN.

With the start of the troops the crowd sourced to the parade ground, hanking itself on the rising ground. As the regiment threw out its long line of blue, the prosident, with the cheers of the thousands ringing in his ears, entered the field in his automobile, and accompanied by his party. mobile, and accompanied by his party and exort. 6 o'clock before the last troops had parsad and the president turned to congratulate Coi Scott upon the splandid appearance of his command.

While the regiment was leaving the held, President Taft spent several minutes in chatting with the surrounding officers, and was then driven to Coi. Scott's residence, where he rested until the hasouet.

Unusual precautions were taken for the safety of the president during his evening at the fort. Under the direction of Lieur Silitman, officer of the day, Coi. TOMORROW'S PROGRAM.

At $130 e clock Sunday morning, President Tark will leave the Knutsford hotel for the inbernacle The fine of march will be along Third South street, west one block to Main street, thence north to the tabernacie. It is urgently requested that all attending the service at the tabernacle be in their seats at 8:45, as President Tuft will begin speaking at 9 o'clock

At 10 o'clock President Taft will review the living flag and the school children at A street, between south Temple and First avenue. The route chosen to reach this spot is as follows: Along, West Temple street from the tabernacle to First South street, from there east to Twelfth East street, thence north to South Temple street, thence west to A street. The living flag will be reviewed, and then the school children, after which President Taft will be excerted to the Unitarian church, where he will attend service. From A street the party will go west to State street, south to First South street, and east to Second East street, from which point the party will move to the Unitarian church. on Second East street, between First and Second South.

After the service the president and party, accompanied by a military escort, will move along Sec and South to Main street, thence north to South Temple street, and west to the Oregon Short Line depot, where President Taft takes the train for Ogden.

UNIVERSITY STUDENTS,

For the purpose of review tomorrow morning the university students will assemble at the Salt Lake theater promptly at 9 o'clock, where they will group by classes, receive tickets to admit to the space within the ropes on Brigham street, form in line and proceed to Engle Gate. Class presidents will supervise the grouping and marching of their respective classes. The students of the secondary training school will be assisted by Prof. Milton Hennion, principal of that school. All students are requested to bring pennants.

EIGHTEENTH WARD.

Eighteenth Ward—The evening will be devoted to a song service interspersed with brief remarks, including a short address on "The Influence of Music" by Bishop Orson F. Whitney, and musical reminiscences by Prof. George Careless. During the evening several of Prof. Careless' musical numbers, which have never been sung in public will be rendered by the Eighteenth ward choir. Among the selections will be the funeral hymn of President Brigham Young, last rendered on the occasion of his funeral at the Tabernacie in 1877. The solosists of the evening will be George D. Pyper who will sing "The Link Divine," with violin parts by Prof. Careless and G. Herman Schettler; Bossie Edmunds Nowman, who will render with the choir "Come Near Me, My Redeemer," and Hugh W. Dougall, who will sing "The Penitent". H. G. Whitney, director: Spencer Clawson, Jr., organist.

Brilliant Affair Tendered by Fifteenth Regiment at

MANY GUESTS ARE PRESENT.

President Pays High Compliment to American Soldier and His Work.

There was a world of good cheer and fellow feeling exhibited at Fort Douglas last night at the banquet tendered the president. The key note of it all was struck by President William Howard Taft as he lifted his slafe and offered this toast.
"I give you a hearty toast, gentlemen. To the officers of the United States army and their wives."

It was the first time a regiment has over haponetted a president and the over banquetted a president and the nen from the fort made the occasion a great one through their efforts. The anquet was given by the officers of he Fifteenth regiment.

In his address President Taft said part in the last eight years it has been my good fortune to come into closs ontact with the officers of the army ontact with the officers of the army in the Philippines, and as secretary of war, I had good opportunity to learn them, and my experiences have taught me to appreciate and value those officers most highly. I had a feeling of serving with the army in the Philippines. I can't say that the army officers acted with any too work to appreciate toward. warmheartedness toward ommission of which I was a member. They thought that they had a big job on hand, and they didn't want civilian interference. But as time were on, and we felt that after all we were all Americans with a common end, Americans with a common end, soldier and civilian worked amicably

SOLDIERS' WORK.

"From what I know of them now, I will say that there is no tank which army officers may be invited by their country to do which they are not equal country to do which they are not equal to. In peace and war they are efficient. The army officers can perform all of the functions of civil government creditably. The civil service in the Philippines when I was there was quite difficult and harassing and delicate in its execution. The men who were doing that work needed great self restraint to prevent them from breaking loose and committing deeds which have been called

"I met the Fifteenth in the Cammarines." chuckled Mr. Taft, and a wide grin spread over his face, "and I remember your old colonel, who has now long passed to his reward. Colonel Molay it was. I believe, and I shall always remember him. He was a won-deful man, indeed.

At the close of the banquet three rousing cheers were given for the president. He was then escorted by the orderies at the fort to the Knutspent-up enthusiasm of the walting crowds was turned home when the smilling face of the president appeared on the platform. For several minutes President Taff stood on the steps of the car, howing and acknowledging the cheers and salutes of the people.

On each side of the street extending from the deput to Main street, crowds of people were lined up against the ropes enclosing the sidewarks. At every intersection and at every available space along the line of the drive up town, vehicles of every description, from the hig touring auto car to the most humble delivery rig, were contesting for every inch-of room. From the station to the point where the president's car was awalting him the street was kept clear, and affer the greetings at the station had been exclusinged, the party walked up through the cordons of troops to the motor, are, where President Taft stepped into the vehicle bestide Governor Spry, and was swirled up fown behind the galloping mounted orderlies who preceded the president to the fort.

Ameng those to greet President Taft at the station were Senator W. E. Rorah of Idaho and John Hays Hammond of New York. It was "Hello, Bill," with Taft and Borah, and Hello, John" to Hammond.

The signal corps of the Utah National guard, Companies C and H of Salt Lake and Company E of Ogden, were formed in double line, through which the presidential party walked to the cars. The Salt Lake High school cadets also formed a part of the escort. There were 230 cadets under Capt. Webb, and music was produced for the occasion by the cadet band of 28 men.

There were fully 3,000 enthusiastic spectators packed around the Ric Grande station and up Second South street for two blocks. "Everybody" was yelling as the presidential party marched to the automobiles and the marched to the automobiles and the "sweet refrain" was taken up and emphasized all along the route to Main street by the assembled crowds—all anxious to see the president. The big passenger engine on the presidential train came clear through from Denver, though the crews were changed at each division terminal. It was one of the largest passenger engines that ever came in over the Rio Grande, attracting considerable attention. Engines of that size are run between Denver and Pueblo mostly. The pilot engine was also one of the large enstern machines.

The secret service men were "thicker'n bees' around the Rio Grande de-pot before the arrival of the presi-dential train. Chief Mallins of the Denver & Rio Grande secret service and his men cleared the depot platform of all stragglers bright and early, and then chased up at the rear of the president's car to Second South street, to keep a sharp eye on things there. Ex-Deputy United States Marshal E. A. Franks was one of the vigilant ones at the depot.

Among the incidents of yesterday's trip of the president through Utah was that of his meeting twin sisters at Springville. While the school chilat Springville. While the school children were singing and waying flags and the president stood bowing on the piatform, two children were hoisted upon a little projection of the piatform at the end of the car. When the proud father of the children exclaimed "Which is which?" the hig jovial president was laughing.
"I can't tell," he exclaimed. "They both look the same." The dress of the children was identical and the color of their hair would be hard to distinguish apart.

At the Knutsford President Taft was highly pleased on receipt of a gift from Proprietor Holmes of the Knutsford. Mr. Holmes happened into Mc-Cornick & Company's bank yesterday, and saw some specimens of fruit grown in Millard county, several large apples which attracted his attention. He said he never beheld anything like them before, and he suggested to Mr. McCornick that a case be squt to the President's room. Mr. McCornick acquiesced, and the case of apples was forwarded to the quarters of the distinguished guest. They had not been on hand more than five minutes before Mr. Holmes received a summons to the president's room. On entering he found Mr. Taft seated admiringly before the display of apples with a knife in his hand, hesitating how to properly tackle one of the monster specily tackle one of the monster speci-mens.
