A Reunion of Vegetarians.

Wednesday, Oct. 14th, says the London Times, the Vegetarian Society, of which Prof. F. W. Newman is president, held its annual soiree in the Nonconformist Memorial Hall, Manchester. A large number of members and friends took tea together. A similar meeting has been held regularly for some years past within a day or two of the usual demonstration of Liquor Trade Prohibitionists in that city. One of the gentlemen at Wednesday's soiree spoke of Manchester as the Jerusalem of Vegetarianism. Though the evidence of their creed-making progress in that locality is not convincing, there is no doubt that some of the earnest professors have managed to keep their association alive there for more than a generation. According to a statement of the Honorable Secretary, Rev. James Clarke, the society, though small, has rapidly grown of late. During last year the subscriptions amounted to £250 against £170 the year before, and the society had been able to publish a monthly organ and various pamphlets, to have a secretary constantly employed, to hold a number of public meetings, and to take other steps in the propagation of their principles. It had been determined, further, to carry out the business of the society on a much more extensive scale during the ensuing year than had ever been the case in the past. The chairman, Mr. W. Hoyle, of Tottington, said that he had been a vegetarian for thirty-six years. He was, when he began to hold the views he now held, a weaver in a cotton mill. Afterward he went to another employment which was arduous and hot; but he at all times got through his work well, and frequently better than those who did not abstain from meat. Since then he has been the architect of his own fortune. He had carefully studied the question and found abundant argument whether the matter was looked at from a Scriptural, historical, physiological, chemical, or humanitarian point of view, that the principles of vegetarianism were the true ones, and he was persuaded that when the public mind and intellect of the country became sufficiently enlightened in regard to this question the accession to the numbers of the vegetarians would be very great. Rev. C. H. Collyns (Wirksworth) read a paper on the question whether "Vegetarianism had a right to claim any place at all among the social questions of the day;" after which Mr. Gibson Ward (Ross) addressed the meeting. He alluded incidentally to eaters of flesh meat as "blood lappers" and "patronizers of slaughter-houses." After a speech from Professor Newman, a gentleman, who gave the name of West, proposed to put some questions, and on being invited upon the platform he took occasion to protest against Mr. Ward's hard words. He informed his hearers that he had been an abstainer from intoxicating liquor and tobacco during thirty-three years; but he emphatically repudiated, as an Englishman, the statement that he was a "blood-licker." He ate beef and mutton; and if he had been one of the 5,000 who were fed by two fishes, he should never have refused the food which the Lord gave to his people. He might be wrong; but he must say that after what he had heard in favor of vegetarianism that night, he felt less inclined to become a vegetarian than when he entered the room. He believed that animals were given for the food of man. He believed that it was according to the Word of God that the fish in the sea lived on each other, and he required to be convinced that we were not entitled, as human beings, to live on the fish of the seas. Ultimately Mr. West's remarks were brought to an end by a reminder from the chairman that he had wandered beyond the limits conceded to him as an inquirer.

NEWS NOTES.

Apples sell at twenty-five cents a bushel at Albany, Oregon.

Vallejo, Cal., has a "Patent Socket Broom Factory," which shipped 9,120 brooms to various points in October.

Dr. Hall, of the United States Coast Survey, says Mount St. Elias proves by accurate observation to be the highest in North America, its altitude being 19,000 feet.

The St. Louis Globe thinks in view of the overcrowded condition of the clerk market, that there is too strong a tendency of American genius to "mercantile pursuits" at present; that there are too many native "clerks" and too many imported shoemakers in the land.

A suit was recently brought against a saloon-keeper in New York city for damages arising from the sale of liquor to a son of the plaintiff, the effect of which liquor was death. The lad went with a number of his companions into the liquor store of the defendant and drank fourteen times, that, it was said, being the first time in his life he had tasted liquor. Death soon ensued, and suit was brought under the Civil Damage act and a verdict of $2,000 recovered. It was in proof that the young man did not become drunk, but the excessive quantity of liquor killed him without his undergoing drunkenness, which facts were shown in the post-mortem examination.
