Flockmasters Again Present Their Side to Board of Equalization.

DISCRIMINATION IS CLAIMED.

Same Ratio on Flocks Asked as on Real Estate-"Secret Rate" Also Brought Up.

The sheepmen and the state board of equalization had quite a field day yes-terday, in controversy over the proposterday, in controversy over the propos-ed 40 per cent raise in the assess-ment in valuation of sheep, representa-lives from Sanpete county occupying the morning in argument before the board, with Wasatch taking the re-mainder of the day. At adjournment, both the board and the protestants were of the opinion that the statutes covering the system of livestock as-sessment were not practical and need-ed revision. This will be done at the meeting of the next legislature. The grawers seemed willing to accept an assessment based on 100 per cent if valuations were placed, as they claim-ed, on the same taxable basis as other assessable property. At the same time the board held that sheep are the least taxed of any property, though admit-ting an appearance of straining things to make the 40 per cent raise in order to secure return on 70 per cent of the animals that would be rated lower on a 100 per cent count. The sheepmen explained to the board the difference between the government ispectors' count and that of the as ed 40 per cent raise in the assess-the difference between the government inspectors' count and that of the as-sessment boards in this way. The gov-ernment officials counted lambs and all, while the assessors do not count lambs. Moreover, it was claimed that the same flocks were counted three lambs. Moreover, it was claimed that the same flocks were counted three times because enumerated in as many different counties through which the herds were traveling. A point was made by the protestants that sheep in Utah on Jan. 1, are worth at most $3 to $3.50 per head, and at that figure are taxed more proportionately than any other class of property. The board per contra, claims that sheep are worth $4.50 to $5 per head and are the least taxed property in the state.

worth $4.50 ito $5 per head and are the least taxed property in the state. Flockmasters contended also that it was proper 30 per cent of the sheep should go untaxed because of heavy losses in some years. This argument was offset by the board in stating that many of the fruit raisers in this state had lost their entire crops through frost, and no such provision had been made for their relief. Then it was claimed that the highest loss to sheep growers was not over 15 per cent. claimed that the highest loss to sheep growers was not over 15 per cent. However, the board was ready to ad-mit that a flat raise on sheen all over the state might work an injustice on the small growers whose sheep had been counted in full, and at present date there was no visible way out of this dilemma. The growers then con-tended that a flat rate on sheep was unjust because of the different breeds of sheep, and consequent variation in values, sheep in the northern part of the state being worth more than those in the southern part. SECRET RATES.

SECRET RATES.

The matter of what was called "secret rate cutting" was brought up. sheep grazing in different counties dur-ing the year, paying part tax in each. It was claimed that some counties made secret rates to keep the sheep in their limits during the January assessment time. One member of the board said he knew of one case where the assess-ment was only 50 per cent of the actual number of animals for the reason mentioned above

The receptacle contained a note and 15 cents, and the bartender, after reading the note, poured some beer into the bucket and gave it to the boy, who took the liquid to the man who sent him, Eugene Bur-ling, a blacksmith at 739 south State street. The lad claimed he did not know what was in the bucket, and Burling said he sent the boy with the note and the money. The council de-cided that the boy was blameless in the matter, and that the bartender did not sell the beer to the boy as such, but upon authority of the note. Bohrem had pleaded guilty in the police court to selling the beer and had paid a fine of $10, he said, on the advice of the police judge. Heath Bros, he said, had not returned him the $10, nor had they agreed to do so. He quit their employ two weeks ago. The case against the Albany bar, charged with selling liquor on Sunday.

tate pays in one case of a $600 valuation when the property sold for $1,700. The Newhouse build-ings valued at a million were assessed only at $125,000. On this basis, sheep at $3 should be assessed at a trifle over $1 The board stated that at the date of assessment the buildings were under construction, and not worth the value when completed. The members of the board also told Mr. Smith that the question was not what other prop-erty was paying, but that 30 per cent of the sheep had been escaping taxation, r little oversight which the board proposed to readjust. A peculiarity in the ethics of assessment was developed in the appearance of T. W. Jones, the owner of 7,000 head of T. W. Jo of sheep. The count for purpose of assessment was made at 5,000, and be-cause half of the year the herd was in Wyoming, the assessors cut this fig-ure in two. The state board failed to yiew the matter in this light.

RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED.

Otto Otteson of Sanpete county pre-sented to the board resolutions recent-ly adopted at Manti protesting against any raise on cattle. He held that Utah cattle are not worth over $17,50 per head in the herd, but was willing that the count be 100 per cent if cattle were rated at $1 each Members of the board asked how it was that the wi-dow's cow was assessed the full dow's cow was assessed the full amount, while a herd of 100 head were counted as 70. Mr. Otteson said that the assessors could hardly count 70 per cent of one cow without injustice to the cow. The members of the board, however, seemed to think that the in-justice would be on the widow. The hearings are continuing through today.

rayonite from the next number, a stift-ing march by Holzmann, and through-out the entire evening, the entire popu-lation of the resort was gathered around the band in the main bowery, where the first concert was given. No one seemed to think of leaving until after the close, when the 10:15 p. m. train was ready to depart. Manager Langford had the first con-cert given in the bowery in order to make the public the more readily ac-quainted with the band. In this he suc-ceeded fully, but hereafter, evenings, the band will play in the hippodrome, and on the open platform, afternoons. It was thought that the low roof of the bowery would mar the musical effects; and while it did to some extent this was not so noticeable as was feared. For men who had had no sleep to speak of for two nights, and were tired out with continuous travel, the band did remarkably well. It was apparent from the beginning that Ellery's is one of the crack concert band organizations of the country, and before the close of the evening the impression produced was so favorable, that the unanagers of both resort and band were confident the take. Ellery's band has an instrumentation for complete work, including 10 B flat and two 1 flat clarinets, an alto and two bass clarinets, three flutes, two obces, four saxaphones, four trumpets, three French horns, three alto horns, five trombones, two baritones, four tubas and the drums. The trumpet players are of special excellence, their work several times, noticeably in the "Poet and Peasant" overture, show-ing the guilt work of the bass drum-mer also attracted general attention. The baritones at times played with two much "gusto." and the arrange-ment of the Lucia number seemed de-performance in general was of high order, ideal in precision, unity and vig-or of attack, and liveliness of expres-sion.
