OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH, - MARCH 6, 1895.

The Libel Suit.

The H. L. Rogers criminal libel suit against William Glassman and the Standard Publishing company was commenced in the Fourth district court yesterday. Spectators filled the court room. It took all the forenoon to get a jury. Judges Maginnis and Weber are prosecuting attorneys. Judge L. R. Rhodes and John D. Murphy appear for defendants.

L. R. Rogers, the plaintiff, was a candidate for the Constitutional Convention and in reviewing the merits of the various candidates in the Standard a square black block was printed to represent the general character of the plaintiff. Considerable local interest is taken in the case.

An Awful Crime.

J. P. Spencer, a carpenter who has a shop on Patterson avenue, was arrested for enticing little girls into his shop for immoral purposes. He had a hearing before Justice Bagley, who took the matter under advisement.

Notes.

On Saturday, March 16, the women of Ogden will publish the Standard. The names of the ladies connected with the different departments guarantee Ogden a journalistic treat. The entire proceeds are to be devoted to charity.

The prohibition meeting held in the Tabernacle last evening was well attended.

The funeral services over the remains of Harry Palmer, the unfortunate victim of a duel of bartolle acid, was held at the family residence yesterday. Bishop Moroni Brown and Counselor W. Jackson spoke comforting words to the bereaved ones very much distressed over the occurrence, as there is not the slightest idea that he committed suicide. Although out of employment, his home was well supplied with all that was necessary. His life had been devoted to his wife and two little children.

CO. I, FIRST INFANTRY.

Washington's and Captain Dunning's Birthday Celebrated.

CANNONVILLE, Utah, Feb. 27, 1895.

Editor Deseret News.

Washington's birthday was duly observed here by Company I., Third Battalion, First Infantry, N. G. U., by a drill, parade and company inspection under the supervision of Captain John W. Dunning, Lieutenants A. J. Hansen and George W. Johnson. At 2 p.m. the "assembly" was sounded by the bugler, the company falling in on the parade ground in "full marching order." After the inspection the command was exercised in the manual of arms, marching, etc., and it is said to the corps' credit, they handled their pieces like old veterans, observing the proper cadence with accuracy and precision, which brought forth words of praise and worthy comment from the spectators. A hurried and novel feature of the exercises was a "drill ouwn," in which the entire company competed. A social ball in the evening completed the day's festivities.

Company I. is more than anxious for the first annual encampment to come off in order to compete with any company in the regiment for the best drilled men in the N. G. U., which we claim we have in the person of John M. Dunning, who also enjoys the honor and distinction of being the oldest soldier (in point of service) in the National Guard of Utah, having to his credit eleven years' active service in the United States army. And last, but not least, we lay claim to having in our ranks the ugliest man in the entire guard. Of course we withhold the gentleman's name and points of ugliness till the time to "show up," when we will be a sure winner. Company I. has been honored by Col. Henry Page commanding the regiment, in the selection of Negni P. Howard as regimental color bearer, a position the gentleman will fill with credit to himself and with honor and reverence for the regimental flag he will proudly bear.

On the evening of the 25th inst company I. gave a grand ball and promenade in honor of the anniversary of our esteemed captain's birth, who upon that day, to use his own language, was "forty years in the wilderness," eleven of which he spent as a soldier in defense of his country. Our hall was tastefully decorated with the Stars and Stripes, stacked rifles, bristling bayonets, haversacks, canteens, etc. At the back of the stage was suspended a large-sized crayon picture of Captain Dunning, which for artistic workmanship true to life, etc., was admired by all. At 7 p.m. the hall resounded with the shrill notes of the bugle, the "assembly" being sounded, when the grand march was formed, led by Captain Dunning and lady. At the conclusion of the march the bugle again pealed forth a signal to "rally by squads" in the quadrille, when the social festivities commenced. The evening's entertainment was interspersed with songs, speeches, recitations, etc., and an exhibition drill by the boys in blue, in which all acquitted themselves nobly. Dancing being the order on the "firing line" it was kept up till 12 o'clock, at which hour Moshelan Talbot sounded "Taps," when all dispersed feeling to praise the boys of Company "I" for the good time had. Great credit is due to the various committees and the band for their untiring efforts to make the fortieth birthday of Captain John M. Dunning a great success, in which their fullest expectations in this respect was fully realized.

ONE OF THE GUARD.

FOR HOME INDUSTRY.

A Good Suggestion as to Next Season's Sugar Output.

FARNHAM, Iron Co., Utah, February 23, 1895.

Editor Deseret News:

Every true citizen of Utah is greatly interested in home industry, because they know their success means still more thrift, comfort and wealth to the people. The papers intimate that there is a combination called a sugar trust (trust them not at all) who are seeking to destroy our infant sugar factory at Lehi, and that next summer they, the sugar trust, will sell in Utah sugar so cheap that the Lehi factory will be compelled to close down. Will the people of Utah stand idly by and allow the life crushed out of our young and struggling industry? I can't believe it. Let the storekeepers in every settlement in Utah unite in their respective cities and towns and send their orders for sugar to the Lehi factory—order nowhere else—until the Lehi factory is exhausted. Let the sugar factory give to the people the lowest figure at which they (the factory folks and factory) can live. Buy by the carload where towns are too small to do this, unite with other towns. This would enable the factory to give better terms.

"Oh," says some one, "that would not do any good; you would only give private individuals an opportunity to undersell you, and the trust would send agents around to sell sugar cheaper at about half the price the factory could afford to sell it at." Then let the people rise up and effectually boycott the whole outfit of parasites who might undertake this thing. If we cannot do this much for the sake of ourselves and our children we are not worthy of the name we bear. No right thinking people will ever blame us for pursuing an honest course at self-protection.

We all know just as surely as we know that night follows the day what the result will be should our sugar factory be compelled to close down. We would then pay very dearly for our cheap sugar, and when it was too late we would wonder why we did not stand by our sugar factory.

The foregoing remarks will apply to every other home manufacturing as well as to the making of sugar. Let the people rally to their support. By so doing we will receive a glorious future for Utah and for her children.

Trusting that the misunderstanding between the best farmers of Utah county and the sugar factory may very soon be amicably adjusted, I remain, etc., WM. C. MCDONALD.
