I WANT A PIECE OF BREAD MADE OF MUSLER'S FLOUR

New York, Sept. 21.—"I have come from the pole. I have brought my story and my data with me. I have not come home to enter into arguments with one or many men, but I am here to present a clear record of a piece of work over which I have right to display a certain amount of pride."

"I am perfectly willing to abide by the final verdict on this record of competent judges. That must be the last word and that alone can satisfy me and the public. Furthermore, not only will my report be before you in black and white, but I will also bring to America human witnesses to prove that."

Such is the substance of the first message Dr. Frederick A. Cook brought home in person to Adelton today, answering the critics the world over.

Throughout an arduous night of deer of tug boats, outposts of a continent curious, had roared in the darkness for a first glimpse of the Oscar II. At 5 o'clock this morning the explorer was on deck of his ship, and every tug or other vessel which approached, to see whether he could serve his wife on the deck of the craft.

At one moment he thought he saw his wife on a small tug. He raised his hat and waved it. Then he dashed down to the waist of the ship where a temporary companionway had been rigged to permit him to descend to the tug bearing his wife. This, however, was a false alarm, and the explorer returned to the upper deck.

At last the light tug was dimly outlined through the mist, and Dr. Cook sprang to the companionway, leaped across the intervening stretch of water to the tug and dashed up to the hurricane deck, where his wife was waiting, tattered and made a rush for his arms. For the moment he forgot all about the critics who stood a few feet away, until his wife silently led him to them. Then, as he lifted his youngest daughter to his shoulder, the crowd that lined the rails of the Oscar II cheered loudly.

Had been arranged that the excursion steamer Grand Republica carrying Dr. Cook's friends, Dr. John H. Bradley, his wife, should stop in the background to give him a few moments of privacy with his family. But soon there followed a second transfer from the tug to the Grand Republica. As Dr. Cook set foot aboard, Miss Ida Lehman, daughter of an old friend in Brooklyn, threw a wreath of roses about his neck, and laid him on a couch prepared by a gentleman of Bushwick. Bushwick is the name of Dr. Cook's home section of Brooklyn.

Dr. Cook lowered a signed statement in a pail to the Associated Press. Soon afterwards came the tug bearing Mrs. Cook and her two daughters. Dr. Cook clambered nimbly down the ladder and made a rush for his wife. For the moment he forgot all about the critics who stood a few feet away, until his wife silently led him to them. Then, as he lifted his youngest daughter to his shoulder, the crowd that lined the rails of the Oscar II cheered loudly.

He had been arranged that the excursion steamer Grand Republica carrying Dr. Cook's friends, Dr. John H. Bradley, his wife, should stop in the background to give him a few moments of privacy with his family. But soon there followed a second transfer from the tug to the Grand Republica. As Dr. Cook set foot aboard, Miss Ida Lehman, daughter of an old friend in Brooklyn, threw a wreath of roses about his neck, and laid him on a couch prepared by a gentleman of Bushwick. Bushwick is the name of Dr. Cook's home section of Brooklyn.

Dr. Cook looked at R. Brown, positive, patient, taciturn, he endures the business of being a hero with courtesy, but no enthusiasm.

"Are you going to stick by Dr. Cook?" asked Bradley.

"Why, of course, what do you think?" he answered.

Mrs. Cook, at her husband's elbow, had her first taste of publicity she hitherto had shunned, and took it placidly.

On shore the really formidable part of the day for Dr. Cook awaited him. After the first round of welcome about the Grand Republica he had been his to find comparative seclusion in the pilot house. From that vantage point he could see the streets of Brooklyn, black with thousands, long files of automobiles ready, and he knew that a reception had been planned for him and that an orderly arrival was to be the order of the day.

As far as he could see, it was noticeable that no representative of the nation, state or city was there to greet him. Bird S. Coler, president of the borough of Brooklyn, had welcomed him on the Grand Republica for that borough, but the city sent no official representative. But sincere and enthusiastic.

The trip was a triumphal one. The Grand Republica was greeted with the shrill shrieks of hundreds of craft. Dr. Cook stood on the upper deck, and after the first round of welcome about the Grand Republica he had been his to find comparative seclusion in the pilot house. From that vantage point he could see the streets of Brooklyn, black with thousands, long files of automobiles ready, and he knew that a reception had been planned for him and that an orderly arrival was to be the order of the day.

The ceremony was over, and the Grand Republica proceeded up the river, while the band on deck played "Auld Lang Syne" and "Home Sweet Home." Dr. Cook with his family and a few others stood in the pilot house, in view of the thousands gathered on the Brooklyn shore.

One hundred automobiles and 5,000 persons were on the pier and along South Fifth street when Dr. Cook landed. After much confusion the people made a passage and an automobile carrying the explorer, and other vehicles headed by a band, fell into line a mile long. Dr. Cook gave out the following signed statement:
