New York, 10.

Chief Justice Chase had nothing whatever to do with the issue of the habeas corpus writ in the Jeff Davis case, his name being attached as a mere matter of form. The commander of Fortress Monroe will put the prisoner in the hands of the U. S. Marshal, who will be held responsible for his custody. Davis will be furnished rooms at the Spottiswood Hotel, Richmond, until after the hearing of the return to the writ, thus the government does not release its hold upon the prisoner. The matter of bail has not been thought of, and the case is one merely as to why the government holds the prisoner. The report that Chief Justice Chase is to go to Richmond is unfounded; he knew nothing of the issue of the writ in the Davis case until after its issue.

The Herald's Ft. Larned special, dated the 9th, states that Hancock's operations on the Smoky Hill route have driven the southern Cheyennes north; they are moving in four war parties, and struck the South Platte road between Julesburg and Denver night before last, and burned two ranches. In the House of Commons, on the 9th, Lord Stanley congratulated the House and the country at large on the fact that the good sense and moderation of the powers primarily interested, as parties in the Luxemburg difficulty, had the effect of arresting the unspeakable calamities which would ensue the people from a European war. He regretted to observe that the House of Commons should show susceptibility with regard to the action of the Cabinet, for he also voted for the guarantee. The Members of the House are aware that England and, what was an uncommon occurrence, the remainder of the great powers who were parties to the Luxemburg-Belgo-Holland treaty, in 1839, had absolutely guaranteed the territory of Luxemburg to the King of Holland at that time. What the government had now done was merely to adopt that guarantee, to present the circumstances of the case and render it efficacious in view of the changes which have taken place in the Germanic Confederation.

During the debate in the House of Commons on Disraeli's compromise to the amendment, Mr. Gladstone said that the Government bill was a shallow, transparent, dissimulating pretense of a measure for the extension of the franchise, and he despaired of its ever being made a good or beneficial one by the amendment.

In the House, John Bright delivered a speech in which he declared the Derby bill the most unjust and offensive measure ever submitted to the House of Commons. Roebuck and Disraeli defended the Government bill. The debate closed, after a speech by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and strangers were then excluded from the House; a division was taken, when the doors were opened, and it was declared that the vote was for the Government bill by 66 majority. The announcement of the result was received with loud and protracted cheering from the ministerial benches.
