The news of the purses that goes to a manager. The news of their parting came to young Glimore like a streak of light-ning out of a clear sky and he is still stunned by the blow. Speaking of the change, McFarland says: 'I have the highest regard for Harry "I have the highest regard for Harry Gilmore that anyone can hold. He acted for me as a father, he fought for my interests as no other man could fight, he was out for McFarland first, last and all the time, and I never want to forget his kindness, but I feel that I am able to do my own business now. We have always been thick friends and I want to continue as such. "There are but two more fights that I care for and then my puglistic career ing summer

"There are but two more fights that I care for and then my puglistic career will be ended, and I feel that I can handle these two without the aid of a manager. I want to fight Nelson, for 1 know he is easy for me. Then I will take on Gans and my career will be at an end. It is the wish of my mother that I quit the fighting game and I want to grant her that request. It's up to me to get all the money I can out of the game now and the percent-age that a manager would get will come in mighty handy. I have a few weeks' theatrical engagements on and when these are ended Nelson will likely be ready for me. I might take on Gans in July.

"I hope I can impress upon the minds of the public the story that there is nothing between Harry and me that causes parting. He is a clever man-ager, is as honest as the day is long, as shrewd as they make them and as enterprising as ever a man dared to be as shrewd as they make their and as enterprising as ever a man dared to be. For gameness he has no equal, and any man who is fortunate enough to secure Gilmore as a manager will not regret the move. It was with grief that I sent the word that we must part, but I did it in the interests of Packey Mc-Packard " Farland.

Gilmore has worked hard and untir-Glimore has worked hard and unti-ingly for McFarland and his work will likely not have been in vain. There are several good fighters in the world to-day who might do equally as well as McFarland has done, under Harry's

DEFENDS ATHLETES.

New Haven, Conn., April 26.-in his report upon the physique of the crew, football and track teams at Yale, Dr. F. J. Born, medical direc-tor of the gynnasium, declares that, however much college athletics are criticised by the intellectual, their value as an incentive in the develop-ment of the highest type of physical manheod and as a moral agent in the development and formation of character has not deprecinted. Fig-ures are given showing that the chest of the average Yale athlete exam-ined in the healthy adult, and a ined presented the typical oval shape found in the healthy adult, and a flexibility far above the average. The supraclavicular fessae, the notches above the clavicles, were less prom-inent, due to the fact that the apices of the lungs, that portion which in many individuals is in a permanent state of collapse and is never called into action, were well developed as a result of the deep respiration made recessary by violent exercise.

ENGLISH TEAM COMING.

ENGLISH TEAM COMING. New York, April 27.—There seems to be every probability that an Eng-lish lawn tennis team will play in America during the coming summer. This team will not only take part in the regular American championship tournament, but will play against the American team, the first tie In the contest for the Davis cup, won last year by a team from Australia. The winners of the match will go to Aus-tralia in an effort to recapture the cup. The American association does not think it worth while for both the English and American teams to make the journey to Australia, and therefore propose that the English send a team to America to play the American team, the winners only go-ing to Australia. The Dougherty bruthers, former holders of the cup, afe not expected to compete this year, the most likely English players being A. W. Gore, Frank Risley, and S. H. Smith. Among the Americass of the tram are W. A. Larned, Beals C. Wright, Karl Behr, R. D. Little, Rob-ert Le Roy, Clarence Hobart, E. P. Larned, R. C. Seaver, Irving C. Wright and F. C. Colston.
