THE success of the principle of co. operation is no longer a matter of quee. tion in this Territory; it has been tested tolerably well, and where properly managed has been found to answer admirably. Co-operative stores have paid handsome and very satisfactory dividends, and goods have been sold at prices which call forth comments from visitors, they contrast so favorably with the figures at which articles are retailed in the East and the West. To Zion's Co-operative Mercantile Institution is the credit due for putting goods down to a low figure and keeping them there-The Institution was not organized for few men, but with the design of benefiting the community, and this has been kept steadily in view. Small profits and quick returns were to be the means by which dividends satisfactory to shareholders were to be obtained; for it was thought, and correctly too as the num would at a small per centage each time yield a fair return for its use during the year. This was remunerative to the stockholders, and of great advantage to the community at large. By these means the prices of goods have been kept low, and speculators have not had it in their power to fleece the community by asking exorbitant profits by the quarantine officials upon passenon articles. Notwithstanding the sneers | gers and imported goods. The principle of co-operation in horned stock, horses and sheep has also been tested in various parts of the Territory with gratifying results. In another column will be found a statement of the dividend made on the Co-operative Stock Herd in the South; and nearly, if not quite, as good returns are obtained co-operative herds in other Wherever this system of caring for stock prevails and is judiciously carried out success must follow. The evils which have attended the raising of stock, under the old system, are removed by co-operation; it is probable that the examples of the companies already organized will have the effect to bring the system into uni- board the Nevada, which recently arversal use, and whenever this shall be rived here, were brought before Com-

There was considerable lamentation indulged in over this statement, as it gave evidence that all the "Missions," "Associations" and "Societies" which had been organized for the purpose of converting the people were only performing a partial labor. The conformation for this condition of things lay in street-preaching; by this means the ministers hope to reclaim the people from their sins; to make so-called christianity the religion of the people and of the land. Something more than this, however, is required. A religion of power is needed. Not a
