is sown in the best soil, and every gen-eration gains a constant improving ef-fect, until the extreme point within reach, and bounded by the present pos-sibilities of nature in every respect has been gained. Then we have the rule to go by. But not every man can follow a line. Explor-ers in the dense forest have been mis-led and lost for their inability to follow a straight line. So, especially have breed-ers made mistakes! Why is it that so few noted breeders who have been so success-ful as to have given their names to their improved trains of stock, are remember-ed? It is because, as said of old, many a good flock has been so success-fue inability of the owner to wisely ap-ply the use of good animals. Every pir-suit must have a distinct object. The shepherd who desires to improve a flock must have some clear conception of what he wants. One of the first accomplish-ments of a breeder, especially of such easily impressible animals-for good and equally for ill—as sheep, must know just what he is atming at, he must have some definite object in view. But few persons are able to define this want. It is for this reason that the French and German shep-herds, and many of the English as well. tions he denied himself food for those he loved more than himself. In 1863 with exteam he crossed the plains to assist in emigrating the poor. He married his first wife the same winter, and in fulfilling the whole law he has left two large families of loving children with their noble mothers to mourn his death. He was called into the Bishopric of the Spring Lake ward in Utah at its organization, was later made Bishop at Tempe and of the Nephi wards, in this stake of Zion, serving for over 25 years as Bishop, and all over whom he presided, with all who knew him, will ever honor his unselfish life and the true nobility of his manhood. Preparatory works by the United States government for construction of the great Tonto storage dam, with many other private enterprises, are fast progressing and will greatly augment the future possibilities of this fair semi-tropical land. The orange crop here is yearly increasing in quantity and improving in quality, and when once a water supply is assured this whole land may then indeed become in fruits and flowers garden for the gods.

A strongly defined ram may wholly change the appearance of a flock for the better; and quite often it has been found desirable to employ the selected ram on two generations so as to get a double infusion of his bloci into the progeny. Further than this it is very undesirable to go. The rest may be done by selection of the choicest of the lambs, and sometimes by the use of one of the direct progeny of the parent for a season. In every flock of closely related progeny there will be more or less eventness is one indication of close breeding. It may safely go further with sheep than with other animals, but among the highest line-bred cattle there have been the flucat animals ever reared so bred. This is equally true of the nost copular of the most highly improved breeds. This is to be seen in the faces of the animals, or as one noted sheep breeder (a Lelces-ter man it was) said, in the complexion. Well, this is the very beat word he could have used. For what is the meaning of it' Not the color of the face, but the form of the animal as it stood, taken all to-gether: the connection of the parts; the general constitution and appearance. And if this is not the true indication by which the experienced judge bases his verdic in the show ring, what else shall be said in explanation of it? The bleading of the points of excellence of any animal impels the judge's decision, and equally it gives the practical value to the flock. Bis to be deven in and equally it gives the practical value to the flock. Bis on the general qualities—its increas-et material value, and in its inherited ability to transmit these acquired qual-ties to its progeny under a continuance of this manner of breeding.
