Seattle's Eulogistic Tribute To Great Tabernacle Choir

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer, the paper responsible for the untold story that the police "chased the Mormons off the steps of the Auditorium building" at the A. Y. P. U. at Seattle last Friday night, returned itself in its Monday issue with the following lead from page story under a flash head:

Seattle's tribute to the grand concert of highland music last evening by the Tabernacle choir of Salt Lake City, under the direction of Evan T. Hays, and Ellery's band, directed by Taddeo di Carabona, in the Natural Amphitheater on the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition grounds, was a rousing one. Nothing like it has ever been seen in this city. Distinguished persons have come from all over the world to hear and have been elevated by the music. The choir, which has been elevated by the music, has been elevated by the music.

A QUIET THROU. And through all the splendid numbers rendered with wonderful breadth of tone, delicate modulation and exquisite phrasing, there was not a word to mar the harmony of the melodies. On the outskirts of the immense throng, people were riding in and out, constantly leaving and coming back to get a glimpse at the wonderful sight. The choir, which has been elevated by the music, has been elevated by the music.

It was as if the entire city was one big choir. The choir, which has been elevated by the music, has been elevated by the music.

There is a fascination in watching a big crowd. There is not only fascination, but the element of wonder in watching an immense throng as the big bell-like sound of the organ and the choir's voices fill the air.

Liberty stake will be held on Sunday, Sept. 5. There will be three sessions, one at 10 a. m., which will be held at the residence of Bishop H. C. Iverson, 219 east Seventh South street, at 2 p. m., to be held in the Ninth ward meeting-house, and the seventh meeting at 8:30 p. m., which will also be held in the Ninth ward chapel.

AMUSEMENTS

Theater—The regular season opened under brilliant auspices at the theater last night. It was, in fact, a sort of double reunion "in front" and "behind," for the house was crowded with a fashionable turnout of first-nighters who seemed to get real enjoyment out of the exchange of greetings and the critical inspection of each other's costumes. While the scenes of the evening, which had made it possible for the favorite actresses to "come into her own again."

The Bates has scored many personal triumphs in Salt Lake, the most notable having been in "Under Two Flags" and "The Darling of the Gods." But she never gripped her audience with a tighter hold, nor won more hearty admiration for her gifts than in the admirable play which was presented last evening. "The Fighting Hope" is built to give her some rare chances both for passionate outbursts and suppressed emotions, and when in the great third act, she turned like a fury on the unworthy husband for whom she had been spying and plotting to prove his innocence of a theft, only to find that she had covered proof of his guilt, she did some most truthful, natural and artistic work, for which the house rewarded her with some tempestuous applause.

The supporting company, numbering simply a quartet of players—the whole organization went from New York to Washington by automobile, for the opening night—in "The House," played the part of the strongly suspected financier, with feeling and good taste, though perhaps he hardly has all the endowments, physical and artistic, for a character which should dominate. A fine piece of character creation was the lawyer of Mr. Cope, and the secondarily husband, was truthfully portrayed by Mr. Novell, while Mrs. Wells as the house keeper, lent efficient aid. The staging was in all ways admirable.

and concentration, and stamps its author, Mr. Hurlbut, one of our new writers, as a playwright of high grade. The third act is one of the strongest seen upon the stage for years, and the thrilling situation, developed when the wife seats herself at her typewriter, which is the dictation from the lawyer which is to demonstrate the utter unworthiness of her husband, is worthy the genius of Sardou himself.

The play runs out the week with a mainline tomorrow, and is sure to do heavy business.

Orpheum—There will not be many more opportunities to witness the powers of Charlotte Parry as a protean actress in "The Comstock Mystery" at the Orpheum, as an entirely new bill goes on next week. This talented lady is likely to be one of the sensations of the present vaudeville season, as everyone is talking about her.

Colonial—The lively musical play entitled "Fifty Miles from Boston" is in its closing performances at this house. Monday night, Labor day, will introduce the Bangs and Stock company, temporarily guests at the Colonial, in "The Love Route."

Grand—The changing conditions of "Salomy Jane" come to a close tomorrow afternoon and evening, to be followed next week by an elaborate production of Neil Kroy's "Square Man," with Mr. Mack in the title role.

In their wild desire to observe, persons took all kinds of chances. Life and limb were not thought of in climbing to places the less venturesome would have deemed it foolhardy to attempt. And in the open air, around the vast semi-circles was left unattended.

The murmur that rose and fell as the crowd was settling itself into the opening tones from the brass instruments gradually died away as everything on the big stage gradually produced the important moment. And then the baton was seen to move; the harmony burst forth, and in the calm, beautiful evening seemed to send forth the soothing, uplifting influence that is elemental in the music that has marked the inspired moments of the great composers. It is not an exaggeration to say that last night's concert in the open air marked an epoch in the history of Seattle.

Selections from Wagner's "Tannhauser," the soldiers' chorus from "Lohengrin," the "Toreador" song from "Carmen," and other of the more popular classics were received with great outbursts of applause. The soloists were H. J. Brown, Bernice Bee and Messrs. Antonelli, Corinto, Liberator, Florio, De Palma and Manoli.

IT WORKS

The Laborer Eats Food that Would Wreck an Office Man.

Men who are actively engaged at hard work can sometimes eat food that would wreck a man who is more closely confined.

This is illustrated in the following story:

"I was for 12 years clerk in a store working steadily, and I could eat the food without much trouble until after I entered the telegraph service.

"There I got very little exercise and, drinking tea, my nerves grew weak and my stomach got weak and I was soon a very sick man. I quit meat and tobacco and in fact I stopped eating everything which I thought might hurt my stomach, but still my condition grew worse and I was all but a wreck.

"I finally quit coffee and commenced to use Postum a few years ago and I am speaking the truth when I say, my condition commenced to improve immediately, and today I am well and can eat anything I want without any bad effects, all due to shifting from coffee to Postum.

"I told my wife today I believed I could drink a brick if I had a cup of Postum to go with it.

"We make it according to directions boiling it full 30 minutes and use good rich cream and it is certainly delicious.

A STORY OF THE ECHO CANYON WAR

The history of the latter-day Saints seems with vivid and thrilling scenes. None furnish richer material for romance and story than the investment of this territory in 1849, by the army of the U. S.

Around that series of startling episodes, Mrs. Susan Young Gates has built a story entitled "John Stevens Courtship." While all the principals in the story are fictitious, with the exception of Brigham Young, the author has succeeded so well in vivifying her characters, that many speculations will be indulged in as to their identity. It is a novel with an avowed purpose, as set forth in the preface—with the double aim of convincing the young that poverty and hardship are not incompatible with romance; secondly, that the only safeguards for youth are found in self-restraint and obedience to counsel.

The story opens with the famous picnic in Big Cottonwood canyon in July, 1857. The startling announcement of the approach of Johnston's army furnishes the overture of the story and into this scene is woven the plot of the whole narrative. The incidents of danger and war, mingled with the innocent pleasures and laughter of the pioneers, follow in rapid succession.

The hero of the story is a strong creation with whom most feminine readers will long for a closer acquaintance, while the two girls, Diantha and Ellen, are so delightful and so real that many will wonder from what characters in real life they might have been drawn.

The famous "Move" to Provo is told in detail, and it is upon the banks of the Timpanogos River that Ellen Tyler begins her fatal acquaintance with the dissolute soldier from Camp Floyd. The well known episode of the Peace Commissioners' interview with President Brigham Young and his associates in the old Council House, where Brother Dunbar was told to "sing Zion," burns its impress upon these printed pages. The tragedy of the murdered girl presents a painful but salutary lesson to those whose vanity would lead them to sacrifice virtue for pleasure; while the hero, John Stevens, is not held blameless in that unhappy event.

The book has been kindly yet severely revised and edited by members of the Y. M. M. I. A. board, who have adopted it in their reading course.

The book, which is now on the Deseret News presses, contains 285 pages, printed on fine book paper and handsomely bound in green cloth, richly embossed in gold. It will be ready for delivery in about ten days.

Orders should be sent in at once. Price, post paid to any address, $1.00. Special discount to associations ordering half dozen and upward at one time.

TWO BITS NOT ENOUGH.

Nora Christensen Says a Wife Should Receive More Per Day.

Mrs. Nora Christensen filed suit for divorce against her husband, Martin Christensen, a railroad man, yesterday in the Third district court because he compelled her to run the house on "two-bits" a day. Now she asks for $60 a month alimony—$2 a day—to run the house and provide for her three children, and the restoration of her maiden name, Nora Brown.

In her complaint, Mrs. Christensen says that her husband called her a "travagant and careless about the house." She says that he was extravagant in many ways and insisted on her preparing expensive food for him. She also charges him with infidelity and names two women as co-respondents. On several occasions, she says, her husband told her of his love for other women.

Mrs. Christensen secured a restraining order prohibiting him from drawing $300 which he had in the bank. They were married on Sept. 11, 1904.

HOLMES RESIDENCE ROBBED.

Intruder Took His Time When Family Was Absent.

While W. L. Holmes of 1459 Third East street was at work in his garden yesterday, and the house is vacant during the absence of Mrs. Holmes while shopping, a burglar went through the residence and evidently coolly took his time in ransacking the rooms. Two suits of clothes, a pair of shoes and $2.50 in cash was stolen. A roll of Swedish newspapers was found on the back porch of the house by Mrs. Holmes after the robbery was discovered, and names written on these papers may give a clue to the identity of the thief.
