CRITICAL ANALYSIS.

UNIVERSITY OF DESERET, Salt Lake City, June 8th, 1887.

By carefully examining Dr. DeLand's Chemical Baking Powder with the microscope and with chemical reagents, I find that it is free from Alum, Starch, Flour, Bone Ash, Ammonia and White Earth; and that it consists essentially of Cream of Tartar and Bi-Carbonate of Soda.

The Baking Powder examined I purchased at Barnes & Davis, in this city.

J. T. KINGSBURY, Chemist.

are unable to disprove the Statement on every can of DeLand's Chemical Baking Powder "Made of Pure Grape Cream Tartar and Bi-Carb. Soda only. No filling whatever."

CAUTION—Use one fourth less of this Baking Powder, and one-half less shortening with all recipes than with other brands. d

EVENING NEWS.

Tuesday. March 13, 1888.

PACIFIC COAST NOTES.

CULLED FROM LATEST WESTERN EXCHANGES.

—Virginia, Nev., has a single small-pox case, and 1000 persons were vaccinated on Friday.

—Santa Rosa, March 1.—The most remarkable case of idiocy exists in the northern portion of this country that has ever come under the observation of man since Nebuchadnezzar, the Babylonian monarch, who, bereft of reason, wandered pitifully and aimlessly through the pastures of Babylonia, making his dwelling with the beasts of the field. The case is that of a twenty-four-year old daughter of a well-known stock raiser of this county. The daughter has been an idiot from infancy, and the only desire, passion or manifestation of will power above that common to the brute order, is an inordinate desire, enforced with an iron will, to lead a bucolic life and roam with herds of cattle. In other respects she is but a blank, an emotionless and passionless creature, as great a stranger to the comforts of civilization as the South Sea Islanders. The only time she ever displays pleasure is when she is separated from the bovine species or within the sound of human voices. And then her desire is not manifested by tongue, for but few inarticulate sounds, much less an intelligent expression, ever fell from her lips. When separated from her favorite companions only for a few hours, she seems restless and again with bare feet follows the cattle trails through the mountains till she finds the lowing head. Those who have suddenly come upon her while hunting say her appearance is most horrifying. Her long matted hair and glaring, protruding eyeballs and a slender frame clad in tattered rags presents a sight that has caused more than one bear-hunter to quail. Her father and brothers do all in their power to make home attractive to her but have failed in every attempt. It is with the greatest difficulty that she is induced to take food, and she never sees the inside of her father's house unless brought there by some member of the family.

THE QUACK DOCTOR.

HOW HE EXPERIMENTED UPON THE POCKETS OF AN IGNORANT CROWD.

A short time ago a quack experimented in Lambeth with considerable success upon the pockets of an awe stricken crowd. After a preliminary harangue and a terse little lecture on the viscera, which the charla an sketched in with colored crayon upon a black board on which the human skeleton was outlined in white paint, the fellow came to business. "I am going to demonstrate to you," said he, "by a startling experiment upon one of you bystanders, that my miraculous remedy can cure all diseases of the lungs and chest. Now, whoever's got a bad cough or cold on the chest let stand forward." There was a little hesitation and a good deal of giggling. "Don't be afraid, my friends," said the quack; "it's all free gratis, for nothing. Let any afflicted person come forward and I'll show him the nature of his disorder, and give him a packet of my lung healers for nothing. At last a man with a violent cold and cough came forward. The quack doctor pretended to sound his chest with a stethoscope of almost pantomimic proportions and informed the staring crowd that the patient was in a galloping consumption.

"My friend," said the quack to his unfortunate victim, "so terrible is this disease that you can actually see it." He handed a glass tube to the patient and then poured a pint of clear water into a large tumbler. "Just you blow into that water, my friend," he cried. The man obeyed and the water grew discolored, turbid and at last as white as if it had been mixed with milk. The patient himself became as pale as ashes. "This unhappy man, my friends," said the quack, as he held the glass on high, "if he hadn't had the good fortune to come across me to-night wouldn't have been long for this world. I should have given him about a fortnight; that's all. Now a packet of my lung-healers will cure him. What you see in the glass of water are his vitiated humors, the products of corruption. My magic lung-healers destroy these humors in the body or out of the body. Observe, my friends, watch me carefully, there is no deception here." The quack dropped a pinch from one of a packet of powders into a glass, and directed the patient to stir it with the tube. The water became immediately clear. Then he reaped his harvest. The water was lime-water, and the carbonic acid in the man's breath naturally threw down the carbonate of lime at once, and rendered the water turbid. And the miraculous lung-healer was simply a little citric acid and sugar which instantly redissolved it.—Saturday Review.

Idaho Advancing.

It may seem as preposterous to many to speak of steamboats in Idaho as did the scene in the American play at one of the French theatres which represented a steamboat on its way from New York to Chicago, but nevertheless there are steamboats plying in Idaho waters. There are two is almost constant service on Lake Cœur d'Alene. Their trips were interrupted for a few weeks this past winter by the presence of ice in the lake. Idaho has more modern improvements than many outsiders give her credit for. Previous to the discovery of gold in 1860 she had very few permanent settlers. The territory was organized in 1863, and now after a lapse of twenty-five years the population is about 60,000. There are about one thousand miles of railroad within her borders, good wagon roads in almost every direction, and a perfect network of good trails for pack trains, and now steamboats can be added to the list of means of transportation in use in the territory.—Ketchum Keystone.

THE CORPSE IN THE SAFE.—Anything more distressing than the untimely death of a little boy of seven, which is just reported from Paris, it would be hard to imagine. The only son of a French tradesman was playing in his father's room, when he perceived that the safe was open. In a spirit of boyish fun he got into it. Presently the father came into the room, and before leaving for his day's work, locked the safe—the child keeping silence the while. Soon the little fellow was missed; the police were called in, and hue and cry raised. Next morning the father opened the safe—to find his son a corpse. The moral, of course, is obvious, but the story is horrible.—Pall Mall Gazette.

SHREWD SWINDLERS.—First Confidence Man—You seem to have struck a streak of bad luck, Bill.

Second Confidence Man—Why do I?

"You've got on such a miserably cheap, shelf worn suit of clothes. Don't believe that it cost over $7, did it?"

"No, but these clothes wasn't bought for economy; these clothes mean business."

"Business?"

"Yes. I'm trying to pass myself off for a rich Philadelphian."—Omaha World.

BELLEVUE BOOMING.—It is said that last Sunday was a very busy day in Bellevue. The Baptists immersed a half dozen converts in the pure crystal waters of Wood River; the Methodist held service; the salvation army had a muster; a temperance society organized; a singing school was inaugurated, and the day wound up with a performance by the Georgia minstrels in the evening. The saloon men murmur a good deal because all these meetings interfere with their business, and they can do nothing until after these transactions are ended, especially the salvation army business. Bellevue must be on the high road to a boom.—Ketchum Keystone.

Defendant—As to the matter of alimony, y'r honor, you must not forget that I am a poor man.

Judge—Testimony has been adduced to prove that you had $10,000 in cash a month ago.

"Yes, your honor, but my lawyers demanded pay in advance."—Omaha World.

Landlady—Jane, pass Mr. Dunley the salt for his egg.

Dunley—Thanks, not any salt. This egg is none too fresh as it is.
