Special Correspondence. Provo, Oct. 1 .-- A. J. Sprague of the United States bureau of fisheries, spent some time in Provo last week on his visit to the state with a shipment of trout fry from the Leadville hatchery with which he has been connected from the time of its establishment to the present. Mr. Sprague has been in the state before, and has visited the sites hatcheries. He is of the opinion that Spring creek offers the best and an ideal site, and that a hatchery there can produce 65,000,000 trout fry a year He, is also an advocate of hatcherie for bass at some point or points on the shores of Utah lake, and believes the cultivation of bass and stocking lake with them on a large scale is the most practicable and profitable way of overcoming the carp nulsance—as it is considered by many—as he thinks that in time the bass will destroy the carp. although he does not claim this can be done in a year or two, but only by persistent work on a large scale. Mr. Sprague is of the opinion that enough attention is not paid by state associations and officers to breeding fish, and that the important thing to do in maintaining and increasing the fish supply is to keep the waters well stocked. Mr
