Blackwell, the aged woman suffrage wardor of Bos-ton, Mass., last night at a dinner to the Public Policy eth. Continuing .he said: "While wages appear larger upon the surface than they were 10 years ago, they are in reality smaller, because statistics show that it now requires $1.46 to pur-chase what $1 bought then, and the influ-ence of women is needed in Congress to remedy this matter." Mrs. Lilla Day Moore of Topeka, Kan., grew enthusiastic over the temperance question, despite the fact that a major-ity of the men and women assembled at the tables had glasses of beer before them when she urged the abolition of saloons.

woods of Maine and whose remarkable cures attracted wide-spread attention among the medical fraternity. He de-clares that it will heal the lungs and cure any cough that is curable and will break up an acute cold in twenty-four hours. The ingredients can be secured from any prescription drug-gist at a small cost and is easily mix-ed at home. The only care necessary is that it be thoroughly shaken. Be sure not to buy the ordinary bulk oils nor patent medicines using the name 'Oil of Pinc,' as they will pro-duce nausea, on account of the impur-lies they contain and frequently do permanent injury to the kidneys. The "Concentrated" oil of pine is put up for medical use in half ounce vials inclosed in small round screw-top cases which protect if from heat and light. It is also said to be an excel-lent remedy for lumbago and all forms of uric acid rheimatism. Kaulbars did not carry it out, giving as an excuse the non-arrival of troops." How Kaulbars failed to stop Gen. Nogi's victorious advance is related with much detail, and constitutes in it-self a vivid recital of the blunders, cross purposes, incapacity and conse-quent disaster. Kaulbars is directly accused of failure to carry out his in-structions and of fatal inactivity in de-fance of urgent, reliterated orders at crucial periods of the conflict. "The manner in which Kaulbars di-rected the operations of his cavalry was ineffective and unhappy." Kuropatkin says: "His utiforiunate choice of officers resulted in operations which were unskillful and marked by lack of devotion. The cavalry under Gen. Grekoff and two forces under Etchoiz and Pavioff, in disobedience to specific orders, operated against Oku instead of against Nogl. There was no combination, and most of the detach-ments of cavalry remained inactive and effuent to advance, remained entirely passive and make no attempt to chal-ienge the enemy. The cavalry also did nothing. "Kaulbars was ordered on Feb. 15 to PERMANENT CURE

KUROPATKIN'S CONCLUSIONS.

KUROPATKIN'S CONCLUSIONS. Kuropatkin's "conclusions" declare mander-in-chief's orders to attack, re-mained inactive and did not even know the disposition of his own troops. The next day Kaulbars again made no move and disregarded orders energeti-cally to attack the enemy's left wing. Details of forces at Kaulbars' dispo-sal are tabulated, and it is shown that "down to Feb. 25, 35 battalions never went into action, while the Japanese were successfully carrying on a turning movement before their very eyes. "At this time." Kuropatkin continues, "the commander-in-chief ordered Kaul-bars to send all troops possible to the right bank of the river. He did exactly to the contrary. We could have concen-trated more than 100 battalions and thrown them against Nogi. Kaulbars not only disobeyed the order to throw troops across the river, but, having lost five days, he went so far in allow-ing the turning movement that on Feb. 22 part of his force was still operating, not against Nogi, but against Oku't "The went so of time and the weakness Kaulbars is further blamed for not re-organizing his forces, which were in a state of great confusion, for draw-ing recklessly on the reserves and for many other shortcomings. The book contains the text of Gen. Kuropatkin's reports to the emperor, in which he enlarges on the causes of the defeat at Mukden. Elsewhere, how-ever, Kuropatkin frankly admits to the emperor that he himself was much to blame for the Mukden defeat, saying he did not insist sufficiently, before the beginning of the battle, on a strong reserve for the decisive moment.

New London, Conn., Feb. 14.-United States Steamboat Inspectors William Withey and John Stewart examined the four members of the crew of the schomer Harry Knowlton who were on watch Monday night when the schooner collided with the Larchmont. The work consists of three bulky vol-imes, respectively devoted to the battle of Lao Yang, of the Sha river and of Mukden. The voluminous general or-ders, statistics, reports and other docu-mentary matter, with the "conclusion," constitute most amazing revelations of disorganization and incapacity, and even of disobedience of specific and urgent orders by certain general offi-cers entrusted with high commands in the field, notably Gen, Kaulbars, against whom a formidable indictment is framed, sadding upon him the en-tire responsibilities of the defeat at Mukden.

REASONS FOR FAILURE.

REASONS FOR FAILURE. Kuropatkin's reasons for the failure of the war are based chiefly on a com-parison of the warlike spirit of the Jaranese, their preparedness and valor, which he said had never been seen in any previous war, and their ability to maintain the numerical superiority necessary to assume the offensive, with the disadvantages of Russia, owing to the hadequacy of the single track from Europe, with commanding officers disobeying orders and in a hopeless state of confusion and cross purposes, with the low state of morale and con-fidence among the troops, continuous news from home of internal troubles and of insults and reproaches against
