

AMERICAN DREW BIG ATTENDANCE

Johnson's Organization Profited
More Than the Old
National.

PUBLIC WANTS TWO LEAGUES

Cleveland Proved to be Best Road
Nine—Sensational Race for Pennant One Cause.

The greatest baseball season ever known has just closed. A careful compilation of the daily attendance figures, which have been kept ever since the American League expanded east, show that 1907 leads all other baseball years by more than 30,000.

The figures show that the American and National leagues drew a grand total of 6,355,361 persons. The latest approach to these figures was in 1904, when persons witnessed the combined games of the National and American leagues. These figures are an increase over last year of 10,282.

The American league out-drew the National, Dan Johnson's organization showing a total of 3,686, while the National figures show a grand total of 2,669,175, an increase of 40,699 more than last year, while the National league shows a decrease of 8,700. Last year the Americans out-drew the National, 3,686; this season the Americans out-drew the Nationals by more than 30,000.

This is accounted for by the sensational race in the American League from start to finish, which has given the public a cushion before the season was well over that the Chicago Cubs were the best in the National.

The National White Sox led all individual cities with a total of 663,367. The Athletics of Philadelphia come next with 600,000 more than last year, while the other cities show an increase of nearly 30,000.

Last season the Chicago Nationals out-drew the Americans by nearly 30,000, while this season, although the White Sox did not fare as well, the Americans and Nationals did. Combining, their total pulled 28,000 more than the Cubs.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer says:

"The public has seen that more than half of the attendance witnessed the games on the Sabbath. Taking this into consideration, the eastern cities are the best bases for the American League, as the average figure shows an increase of nearly 30,000."

This was reversed in the American League, the western cities outdrawing the eastern. The four eastern clubs played 1,754,457, while the four eastern clubs had an aggregate attendance of 1,254,307.

The largest crowd at the Philadelphia American grounds on a single day was Monday, Sept. 30, when 24,137 persons paid to see Detroit in the sensational seven-round fight contest. The smallest crowd was on April 15, when 2,000 paid to see Boston.

The largest crowd in the Philadelphia National grounds was Saturday, Oct. 6, when 24,000 paid to see the New York Giants, while the smallest crowd was on May 11, when 1,212 paid to see Boston.

The Chicago Nationals have the honor of drawing the largest crowd on a single date in either league, 22,000 turning out on June 3, to see the New York Giants at Comiskey Park.

The figures of both leagues indicate that not a club in either league will show a deficit.

This proves conclusively that the public wants two major leagues and will support both.

Here are the figures.

GANS IS WILLING.

Dusky Champion Has Not Retired—Out for Money.

Joe Gans has quit the fight game, says Tom Andrews in the Milwaukee Journal.

The idea one gets after talking with the Old Master, who is appearing at the Star this week, Joe says he has retired from boxing, but he may come back again. George Meakin or Paddy McFarland, or any of the other new champions his successor face a battle with him.

"I am not the game because there was no money in it," said yesterday. "There are several good lightweights around the country just now, but none of them are strong enough to give me a chance for a title. There is a great deal of news paper talk about another match between myself and Nelson, but it doesn't look as if any thing will come of it. In the first place, I would be in poor shape if the purse I fight Nelson again. He gave me the short end of it when he had the upper hand and now that I am on top, I don't want to give him the short end."

In the second place, I haven't heard from any of these clubs which are offering $2,000 purses. According to the papers, Tex Rickard and a dozen or so modern fight promoters are offering rich purses for another battle between myself and the Dame, but none of them have ever notified me about it. Show me the money and I'll be back."

Gans does not take a serious view of Paddy McFarland. Tommy Murphy or any of the other champion amateurs I have seen are not up to the mark. Paddy is a good, clever youngster, but doesn't figure him any closer to the title than George Meakin, whom he defeated in Los Angeles. Neither he nor Adam Broome, or with whom I think McFarland can beat him, has got it.

"McFarland is a good lad from all reports," Gans said, "but he will have to prove himself. Herman is a good fighter and know what he can do. He is a clever lad as the next one, and is game, and if McFarland beats him it will be a surprise to me."

One looks on Jimmie Gardner as one of the hardest men around the country to beat, but says there is little chance of ever getting a match with him.

"Gardner is a good fighter, but make a better batch with me than any man in the country, but there would be no money in the match. He would like to see Jimmie and I fight, and I suppose where there is a fight promoter in the country who would put on a suitable purse for us. They all say that I am quitting the game because I feel myself failing, but that when we the money and I'll come back."

Weak Hearts

Upon the heart action depends not only health, but life. Over-work, worry, great mental effort, sickness, or any unusual strain upon the nervous system, affects the heart, by increasing its labors. In this hustling age it is not surprising that one person in four has a weak heart. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure strengthens the heart nerves and muscles and restores healthy activity.

"I wrote the Miles Medical Co. asking advice as I was suffering with heart trouble and had been for two years. I had pain in my heart, and had left side of chest and had not been able to draw a deep breath for two years. Any little exertion would cause pain, but I could not sleep at night without it. I had to give up my work. They advised Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine, which I took with great result. I am better health than I was before, having gained 14 pounds since I commenced taking it. I took about three times a day. The two years of pain have been troubled me but it is over now. I recommend it to every one."

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that if the first bottle will benefit, it will fail to refund your money.
