

ment Exercises at the close of school was a misnomer to some, yet it was full of beauty to those who are earnestly travelling to a successful end in our college.

He spoke of the spirit that had founded our college and urged the students to keep the great origin of our institution in mind.

Rhapsodie Hongroise, a piano selection, Miss Celia Sharp.

The promotions from the Intermediate to the Academic department were then read, as follows:

| | |
|-----------------|----------------------|
| Angella Barrus, | Edith Rossiter, |
| Rena Baker, | Edward Spencer, |
| Lylla James, | Stephen Worthington, |
| Daniel McRae, | Bertie Bowring, |
| Maud Paul, | Hannah McLaughlin, |
| | Katie Morris. |

The following were advanced on condition that they complete all prescribed studies of the Intermediate grade:

| | |
|----------------|-----------------|
| James Saville, | James Woodruff, |
| Elijah Weiler, | Ida Bennion. |

President Joseph F. Smith then made an address, encouraging those working for the success of the college and predicting its great future.

President George Q. Cannon said: The education given you here is but a beginning for the education of our lives. Here we merely lay a foundation upon which we build throughout life. He valued highly a practical education. Formerly it was necessary, in order to be properly recognized, to acquire a knowledge of the dead languages. Now this is not thought necessary to success and a more practical education is much admired. He hoped the tendency to practicality in our schools would grow and that manual training would soon be given in our schools. A proficiency in such profession as law should not be thought necessary to social preferment. He hoped to see the day when the manual professions would place a man in the highest society and secure for him remuneration such as a lawyer now receives for his.

President Angus M. Cannon then addressed the audience in behalf of the Stake Board of Education. He was pleased with the way our school had been carried on and with the exercises of this day particularly. In conclusion he invoked the blessings of God upon the institution.

"The Parting Hour" was then sung by the students, and the benediction was pronounced by Capt. Willard Young.

PRINCIPAL'S REPORT.

Following is the principal's report, minus some of the minor details:

SALT LAKE CITY, May 19th, 1892.

To the President and Board of Directors, Latter-day Saints' College Association.

Dear Brethren—In compliance with an important duty of my position I submit to you a report of the work done in the Latter-day Saints' College during its sixth academic year, and of its condition at the close of that period. The year has comprised two terms, the first extending from August 31st to December 19th, 1891, a period of sixteen weeks; and the second from January 4th, 1892, to the present date, a space of twenty weeks.

DEPARTMENTS.

During the greater part of the year the Intermediate department has been conducted in three divisions, the first section in charge of Instructor J. J. Walton, the second under Instructor Richard Haag, and the third under the supervision of Instructor W. H. Chamberlin.

In this department were during the first term twenty-seven classes, with one hundred and six weekly recitations and five teachers.

During the second term there were twenty-two classes, holding ninety-nine weekly sessions, conducted by five teachers. Some of the students of this department have been advanced to the academic department. Their names will be read before you.

The academic department has continued under the supervision of Instructor Jos. Nelson.

In this department during the first term were eighteen classes, with seventy-five weekly recitations, conducted by seven teachers; in the second term eighteen classes, seventy-one weekly recitations and seven teachers.

Some of the students of this department have been pursuing the regular courses leading to graduation; of these nine have graduated in the business course, one in the scientific, and one in the literary. In accordance with this result of their labors, certificates of graduation have been issued to them this day.

THE NORMAL DEPARTMENT

was in charge of the undersigned until the end of the first term, since which time Brother Philip Maycock, a member of that department, has acted as monitor under my direction. The class work of this department is tabulated as follows:

In this department were conducted, in the first term, 5 classes, with fourteen weekly sessions, by two teachers; during the second term there were fifteen classes, with 31 sessions, conducted by six teachers.

The theology classes of the academic and normal departments, conducted separately during the first term, were combined during the second, pursuing the study of Church chronology.

Most of the students of this department have been pursuing either the junior or senior course in theory of teaching; of these thirteen have graduated in the former course and eleven in the latter. Certificates have been issued to these, recommending them respectively to the primary and the intermediate grade of the Church school service. Most of those graduating in the senior course are last year's junior graduates, although three have pursued with success both the junior and the senior course this year.

As was the case last year, a number of students have been admitted to this department free of charge, under the appropriation made by the Church, each one thus privileged having previously signed a statement of compliance with certain necessary conditions.

The work in the department is being gradually extended to meet the requirements of advancing educational science; and we confidently hope to establish ere long a course of normal training fully adequate in all respects to the needs of students preparing to take upon themselves the responsible duties of teachers among the youth of our people.

THE CHURCH STANDING of the students is represented by the following list: High Priest, 1; Seventies, 4; Elders, 21; Priests, 5; Teachers, 4; Deacons, 49; lay members, 128; not baptized, 4; total, 216.

The regular work of the

has been pursued as before, with the exception that under your direction an important change was made in our manner of closing the day's session and incidentally in the time of calling certain theological meetings. Our devotional exercises at the close of the day have been suspended, and the students permitted to leave the college immediately upon the completion of their class work.

As a result, the Priesthood meetings and general theological classes, previously held after the regular work of the day, have been convened in the morning during the regular time of the theology recitation, and have alternated with the bearing of testimonies in the various theology classes.

Our acknowledgments are due to Elder George Reynolds, who, as in the
