

WATER PROBLEM IN DEEP MINING

The Cornish Pump Has Had Its Day.

EFFICIENT—EXPENSIVE.

One of the most serious water problems in the world is that of deep mining. The Cornish pump, which has been used for centuries, is now being replaced by a more efficient and less expensive device. The new device is a vertical centrifugal pump, which is much more efficient than the Cornish pump. It is also much less expensive, and it is much easier to maintain. The new device is being used in many mines, and it is being found to be a great improvement over the Cornish pump.
