FRAGMENTS.

A good milk cow wanted. See advertisement.

The stockmen will find something to their interest in our Sunday telegrams.

Prof. Carleton has received a note from Edith Clawson, saying that she will be "on deck" and full-voiced tonight.

L. D. Watson, of Parowan, and Levi Minnerly, of Wellsville, should have been released from the penitentiary today, but were not, from some reason unknown.

There was an alarm of fire shortly after noon today, caused by the lighting of the contents of a tar kettle in the rear of McKinnis' livery stables on Main Street. No damage was done, but two hose carts were taken to the spot in double-quick time.

LOCAL NEWS.

Bergstrom Backs Down.—On Saturday afternoon Carl M. Bergstrom, of the 11th Ward, went into the Third District Court, accompanied by his attorney, C. K. Glick, and was charged with unlawful cohabitation. The attorney stated that he desired to promise to obey the law in the future, and Bergstrom gave similar assurance to the court. He then received the reward of his renunciation, judgment being suspended during his good behavior.

Superior Grapes.—The finest grapes raised in any part of Utah, north of the rim of the basin, so far as we know, are produced by Brother S. J. Sudbury, at his place in City Creek Canyon. They are of average size, green color, of most delightful flavor, and the skins are so tender that it is unnecessary to expel them from the mouth. This peculiarity renders them readily consumable by all, otherwise they are a most desirable variety, the name of which is unknown to the gentleman named.

Prisoners From Beaver.—Last evening deputy marshals Cuddehe and Cason reached this city bringing with them the following prisoners, all of whom have lately been convicted and sentenced on indictments for unlawful cohabitation in the Second District Court at Beaver: Geo. Hales, James Farrar, R. H. Sudwick, W. Robinson and Thos. Scofield. Of these all are sentenced to six months' imprisonment and $300 fine and costs, except R. H. Sudwick, whose term is one year and $600 fine.

Promise Fulfilled.—Thirty-three years ago Brother Arthur Stayer, of Farmington, Sister Hannah T. King were fellow passengers on a vessel crossing the Atlantic from England to America. During the voyage the lady's birthday occurred, and during a social entertainment among the passengers in honor of it, she, in a jocose manner, requested Brother Stayer to promise that he would write her obituary. The promise was given and today it is fulfilled, as the obituary article in this issue from his pen. Only a few days before her death Sister King recalled and spoke of Brother Stayer's promise.

The Day Nursery.—We are furnished by Mrs. J. M. Vicker, secretary of the Day Nursery and Orphans' Home, with a statement of the financial condition of that institution from August 10th last to the 18th inst. It shows the total cash on hand at the latter date to be $382.53, the disbursements having been only $75.85. A number of special gifts not included in the above were handed in and put where they would do the most good. A committee on entertainment—Miss Snow and Mrs. Royle—have been appointed, and those who contemplate getting up benefits for the Home are requested to confer with these ladies. There are now fifteen children being taken care of.

To Defendants and Bondsmen.—On Saturday Mr. Dickson asked the Third District Court to issue an order requiring all defendants indicted by the present grand jury to appear in court at 10 a. m. to-day for arraignment. The names could not be obtained in time for publication, and of course, as no body knew who were indicted, no one put in an appearance in answer to the order. This morning the following names were called as the parties wanted:

Herman Thorup, Rasmus Nielsen, Henry Reiser, Isaac Brockhaus, Wm. H. Foster, Beeson Eardley, Elijah F. Smeels, John W. Hess, B. H. Schettler, John B. Furster, Wm. D. Owen, Jr., John Cartwright, Ezra Clark, William Watson, H. H. Hawthorne.

All of these defendants except Hawthorne, are indicted for unlawful cohabitation. In his case there is the additional offense of polygamy, which does not, however, belong to the "Mormon" order of marriages.

Each of these defendants was ordered to be present for arraignment tomorrow, Tuesday, at 10 a. m. If any of them fail, their bonds will be called and forfeited unless a satisfactory showing be made.

This afternoon Herman Thorup, of the First Ward, came into court and was arraigned on an indictment with unlawful cohabitation. He pleaded not guilty.

Beeson Eardley, of the Seventh Ward, also pleaded not guilty to a similar charge. In his case the indictment is divided into four counts. He was committed to jail to await the result of the jury's verdict, not being able to furnish bonds on the charge of polygamy and unlawful cohabitation.

Edith Clawson, of the Tenth Ward, also pleaded not guilty to a similar charge. In her case the indictment is divided into four counts. She was committed to jail to await the result of the jury's verdict, not being able to furnish bonds on the charge of polygamy and unlawful cohabitation.

FOUR PRISONERS ESCAPE.

AN EXCITING EPISODE AT THE CITY JAIL.

At about 4:15 this morning H. C. Jacobs, nightwatchman at the city jail, saw a light in one of the upper windows of the jail building. Instantly surmising that something was up he ran to the west end of the structure, meeting a man who was evidently in haste to leave the spot. Drawing his revolver the officer ordered the man to stop, which he did close to the west end of the jail building. The officer took a few steps further, reaching a point where he stood with his back to the stable in rear of the jail building and about ten feet from the southwest corner of it. From here, though it was quite dark, the officer plainly beheld a man in the act of descending a blanket rope from the roof of the jail to the ground. Seeing that a jail delivery was in progress, the officer fired at this man twice.

The second shot seemed to take effect, for as it was fired he dropped to the ground and yelled "murder." At this juncture the man whom the officer had stopped at the west end of the jail started to run, when the latter covered him with his pistol, saying, "Take another step and I'll plug you too!" At this the fellow stopped, and stood in a spot indicated to him by the officer.

The fellow who had dropped to the ground lay against the jail building opposite a space of five or six feet that intervenes between the east end of the stable spoken of and another outhouse. A sudden rise to his feet and a leap of six or eight feet took him into this space, and out of range of the officer's pistol; and, leaving a fence that runs behind the two buildings named, he was in an adjoining lot, and had made good his escape.

At least temporarily. The man whom officer Jacobs did succeed in detaining proved to be Miller, the burglar, a desperate man. He was again locked up. Further investigation revealed the fact that four prisoners had escaped from the jail, only one being retaken as stated. They had been confined in cell No. 1, down stairs, had cut their way through the middle door into the second story and had then cut a hole, or rather opened an old hole, leading through the roof. From here it was easy for the jail birds to slide to the ground.

It is thought that the fellow whom the officer shot at was actually hit, though only slightly wounded. The names of the prisoners who broke out are as follows: Miller, the burglar, captured in Logan, charged with burglarizing A. E. Hatch's residence there; Preston and Mooney, his pals the same affair; and Groves, who was sentenced to 60 days' imprisonment on Saturday last for throwing stones through a saloon window.

Marshal Solomon was immediately notified by telephone at his residence of the escape of the first three, but he did not understand the message to include Groves. He immediately started out towards the Hot Springs, in a buggy, and overtook, near there, a suspicious looking fellow, whom he ordered to stop. The fellow stopped. The Marshal said he was looking for prisoners who had escaped from the city jail. The fellow stoutly denied being such a person. The Marshal had never seen him, as he had been put in jail only on Saturday, and after questioning him further, allowed him to go. The fellow walked on a little way and then started off on a run. Convinced that he was

ONE OF THE ESCAPED PRISONERS, the Marshal tried to catch him again, but could not on account of the darkness, as it was not yet daylight. The Marshal procured help at Beck's Hot Springs and made a thorough search of the neighborhood in which the fellow was last seen, but without success. There is now no doubt but that it was Groves whom the Marshal stopped.

who are still at large: Preston is about 5 feet 6 inches in height; light complexion; light hair and blue eyes; large scar on back of head; is well built, about 34 years old and weighs about 140 pounds. Mooney is 5 feet 8 inches in height; dark complexion; eyes almost black; dark hair and mustache; sallow skin like that of an opium smoker; is about 28 years old and weighs about 140 pounds. Groves is about 5 feet 7 or 8 inches high; light complexion; face of a clown; short hair; weight from 130 to 160 pounds; is about 30 or 35 years old; wears gray pants, brown coat and dark brown hat; has a fresh wound or scar on the nose.

TWO SENTENCES.

JOS. H. DEAN AND ANDREW HANSEN GIVEN THE FULL PENALTY.

This afternoon, in the Third District Court, JOSEPH H. DEAN, of the 19th Ward of this city, was called to receive sentence. The court asked Mr. Dean, is it your intention to hereafter obey the law in relation to polygamy and unlawful cohabitation? Mr. Dean—I have no promise to make, your honor.

The court then inflicted the full penalty of six months, $300 and costs.

Mr. Richards asked that Mr. Dean's sentence on the other charges be released.

Mr. Dickson stated that imprisonment had the effect of releasing the defendant from all bonds under which he had been placed. The sureties were exonerated.

ANDREW HANSEN, of West Jordan, was then called. He had pleaded guilty to a three-count indictment charging unlawful cohabitation.

The court asked—Is it your intention to obey the law in the future, or to continue to violate it?

Mr. Hansen—I have no promise to make.

Court—Are you a man of means?

Mr. Hansen—No, sir.

Court—You will be sentenced to imprisonment for six months on each count, and a fine of $100 on each, and the costs of court.

Mr. Hansen—I am not very good for a bicycle until you reach the top of the mountain. From there to Pangloss is a fine road. Parowan cañon has some of the best scenery I have ever seen, especially now that the trees have put on their fall clothes. I returned to Parowan Wednesday night, and left on day at 9:45. I have been treated as well as I could have been since I left home.

Funeral Appointment.—The funeral services over the remains of Sister Hannah T. King, whose death is chronicled in this issue, will be held in the Thirtieth Ward Assembly Rooms tomorrow, Tuesday afternoon, at two o'clock. All friends of the deceased are cordially invited to attend.

OBITUARY OF SISTER HANNAH T. KING.

Sister Hannah Tapscott King died on Saturday, September 25th, 1886 at the advanced age of 79 years and 6 months. She was born at Cambridge, England, March 16, 1807. She was the mother of ten children, only four of whom she reared.

The Gospel reached her at her home, "Dernford Dale," near Cambridge, in 1849, and in 1850 she was baptised into the Church with her three daughters and son, Thomas O. King. Notwithstanding her husband remained an unbeliever for many years afterwards, she had influence with him to induce him to sell out his property and move with her and her children to Utah, which he did in 1853.

Since that time the name of Hannah T. King has become very much endeared to the people of Utah, and as wide as her acquaintance extended she has been beloved as a friend, admired as a woman of genius, and acknowledged to be the possessor of the grandest traits of womanhood, the noblest types of nobility of principle, refinement, generosity, courage, and undeviating rectitude of purpose. Her ambitions were of the loftiest caste, and nothing that was mean, grovelling, dishonest, impure, or unrefined found any lodgment in her naturally aristocratic disposition. She worshipped at the shrine of true greatness and nobleness of soul, and was an unflinching advocate of the true position of woman, was warmly sympathetic and interested in the triumphs of genius in her sex, and through this sympathy became the intimate personal friend of the celebrated Eliza Cook, the English poetess. She was herself the author of several poems of a high order of merit, and her writings addressed to the young will keep green in our memories the name who bore so many years without spot or blemish.

She made great sacrifices for the Gospel's sake. Among these were one of the most refined and cheerful characteristics of English homes, circumstances of affluence, the companionship of relatives and friends, the congenial refinement she revelled in with delight, and surroundings of luxury and attentive care such as few have possessed when the Gospel found them. All of these she surrendered without a murmur, and in lieu thereof accepted circumstances of comparative poverty and hardship, and was content to live in a new country.

It may well be said of her that she knew the voice of the shepherd when she heard it, she obeyed His call, and sacrificed all for His sake; and she died as she had lived, without a complaint for her severe sufferings, full of faith in the Gospel; and she leaves as a new only the remembrance of a devoted mother, a loving friend, an intelligent of a superior order, and a refined and queenly woman.

"PAINFOLD."

THE REVIVAL DOES NOT CONTAIN MUCH VITALITY.

It is idle to speculate upon the moral, material, literary or musical worth of Gilbert & Sullivan's operas; they are written for to-day, not for tomorrow. When the period in which alone they flourish—probably a twelve-month after their birth has passed, they dwindle into obscurity if not oblivion. The elements of vitality do not abide in any of their productions, and when shelved they were best left alone. That they have a breezy, "catchy," original and taking style in the composition of either libretto or music, cannot be disputed; but the music becomes tiresome; their funny things early assume the tinge of the chestnut; and their groupings, situations and mechanisms run down the inclined plane to the "fakir's" hold-forth very fast. There is practically no such thing as a revival of anything they have ever done after it is once set aside. It is like a well-fitting, new suit of clothes, elegant while it is new, but growing old rapidly, and no room when it is threadbare.

The most that could be made of the defunct opera was made, with the exception that sufficient time was not taken for its production and creditless and awkward positions were crucified inevitable. Edith Clawson was so severely afflicted with a cold that she could hardly speak, let alone sing, and when she attempted to do so on one or two occasions, it was case of "sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh." Jennie Hawley made a charming "Buttercup"—much too charming; the part was absurdly and extravagantly overdressed, even for comic opera, but she sang and acted with spirit. B. B. Young was of course the leading spirit of the hour, his fine baritone voice being used with excellent effect wherever opportunity offered. J. D. Spencer's "Deadeye" was the nearest thing to a failure he has yet done; neither in make-up, action, intonation or general effect was he the counterpart of the presentation of the author's creation, and this was a real disappointment to the audience. George D. Pyper's "Ralph" was not his best effort, but it was acceptable, and his "Farewell My Own" solo elicited well deserved applause. J. T. White has a record of "Joseph" already, and he sang a good one and was not impaired on Saturday night. B. S. Young and Ivy Clawson played small parts in a big way and elicited considerable favor.

Prof. Carleton made about all that could be made (with the exceptions noted, of course). He had up his work, and deserves credit for doing so well.
