Fitz al-ways had the price of a brace of fick-cits to Trisco in his pecket and he took Johnson to the Pacific coast and tried to get a match with Burns arter the latter had stopped Bill Squires. Burns evaded the issue and Fitzpatrick wast-ed many days and a big bunch of coin waiting in Frizco, hoping that public opinion would force Burns to face John-son in the ring. Sam finally had to bring Johnson back here. It was an expensive proposition to keep up a sportly inclined puglist in Frizco and Sam's bankroll couldn't stand it.

Fitzpat-rick tried hard to corner the Canadian here, but Tommy was too roxy and crossed the ocean without affixing his signature to an agreement to light John-son. Fitzpatrick spent what money he had left on cable messages, trying to bring about a fight between his protege and the champion, but there was noth-ing doing. He began to lose hope of ever being able to pull off the coveted bout.
