Of Thieves—Dr. Dart's Valued

Treasured bedroams, valuable jewelry and musical instruments were among the plunder secured last night.

by robbers who crawled through a back window and into the stores of J. S. Jensen and the Chamberlain Music company. The thieves were evidently amateurs or young boys, for the ho-

The element of luck also figured in the robbery. A genuine Batiste violin in the window would hardly admit of a man. The value of the goods taken will amount to over $200 to the jeweler, aside from the value placed on bits of family trinkets left for repairs. The musical instruments are worth more than $150.

the property of Dr. J. M. Dart and valued at $2,600, had been on exhibit in the music salesrooms for several days. It was much admired by musicians and was taken away by Dr. Dart only yesterday. It was kept on top of a showcase and could easily have been taken by the robbers if it had been there last night. Mr. Chamberlain is of the opinion that this violin was the magnet which attracted the robbery, as its presence in the store was quite well known and its value was apparent to the observer.

PRIZED HEIRLOM STOLEN.

Misfortune fell heavily upon one customer. An aged woman whose name

The jewelry was to be made in to a necklace. It consisted of coral pearls and turquoises set in gold mountings of the old style. It was among the plunder taken.

The robbers entered through a back window which was reached by climbing to the top of a low shed in the rear of the premises. They left the building through the rear door and the fall of snow covered their tracks. In droppings from the window the men fell upon the showcase, breaking the glass. A mate dropped by the men in entering burned a cloth covering, and that there was no fire as well as a robbery is almost a miracle. From the broken showcase Mayflower mandolin worth $35 was taken. From another showcase in the front of the music store three Besen-

STEAL VALUABLE RINGS.
The greatest losses were suffered by the Jensens. A pair of pliers was taken from a safe in the rear of the store and used to pry open the front window, from which a case containing 24 valuable rings was stolen. The Rings were all first quality gold set with single stones of coral, turquoise, opal and coral cameos. No loose stones of stick pins were disturbed as far as the count shows. From the repair bench six jobs were taken from the small envelopes containing them. Among the lot was a solid gold watch chain, brooches, rings and other smaller articles, valued more highly by the owners than the market price would amount to. So far as known, no cash was secured.

Vick Jensen, employed in the store, was at work during last evening. While he was at the grindstone with his ears filled with cotton to deaden the noise, he heard a crash resembling breaking glass. He made a hurried investigation, but believed that the noise was made by a mouse knocking over a battle. Such occurrences have happened frequently, and when he found nothing to convince him to the contrary he returned to his work. Later Archib. Chamberlain left the store about 10 o'clock after locking all doors and windows.

Both the police department and the sheriff's office have been informed and furnished with descriptions of the Washington, March 28.—President Taft again today stated to senators that he did not consider the appointment of judges a part of senatorial patronage.

ment or judged to be a part of the patronage of United States senators. The president thinks that judicial appointments should be free from political influences. He considers himself to be competent to pass upon the fitness of them for the bench and will do so. At the same time he said he would be glad to receive suggestions from senators and representatives as to their knowledge of the qualifications of applicants. The president has several judgeships to fill in the near future and has received many calls from senators and representatives from the districts where the vacancies exist.

of the early conference visitors is accident Ben F. Nash, of the Eastern States mission. He was on the streets today, wearing the usual smile and shaking every few steps to shake hands with friends.

Elder Rich reports the mission over which he presides as being in a healthy and progressive condition. Recently three conferences have been organized in the New England part of the mission, namely, in Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

"We have the missionaries laboring in the Eastern States mission," said Mr. Rich, "and we could easily furnish work for as many more within the confines of the State as we desire. If we considered of the nation's population residing among such a multitude our work would be very small. The middle Atlantic and New England states teem with such people, and with missionaries in such numbers as could readily be put to work. The successful proselyting of the early '80s could be duplicated."
