

THE AFRICAN DIAMOND FIELDS.

The Grahamstown (Cape of Good Hope) Journal of the 12th of August, in an article on the diamond discoveries in South Africa, says:

"There certainly never has been such a stir in this colony before, excepting at the time of war. Every town and district in the colony has sent its contingent to the army of workers at the Vaal Fields, and still the movement goes on. In May there were about one hundred men at the diggings. Before the end of June there were seven hundred. At the close of July there were over one thousand; and at present it is estimated that there are at the Klip Drift, Paniel, Hebron and Kleskamma Fields no less than two thousand men. When it is remembered that the European population in the colony is scattered over a large surface and at the best but small, and that distances here are very great, it will be understood that pretty strong motives must have been at work to occasion so large a movement. The discovery of the 'Star of South Africa,' now known at home, has been followed by that of other stones, which, if not so valuable as that superb gem, are of great excellence and in large numbers. As the fields are in a country owned by no one who can substantiate his claim there is no organization of labor and there are no means of ascertaining the actual discoveries. Some keep their good fortune to themselves, and again there are cases in which a diamond is talked about until it becomes several diamonds. The customs returns will, after a while, give trustworthy statistics. At present it is estimated that the Natal Company has sent home diamonds to the value of £12,000; that Mosenthal & Co. shipped £4,500 by the Romun; that the Norrem took away £450 and the Northam £2,800, while it is said that the Cambrian will now receive £80,000. If to these sums be added the price of the Star of South Africa a sum of £200,000 is reached, and these shipments leave a large number of gems in the colony and in the possession of diggers at the fields. Some parties are known to have been very successful. The Natal and King Williamstown parties may be especially mentioned. They have divided about £20,000 between them. As a matter of course, out of so large a number of diggers many have been greatly disappointed; and in making the above statement we do so only in our office as reporters of news, and not at all with a desire to excite to rash adventure.

"As to the position of the fields, it may be as well to say that they are within one hundred miles west of Bloemfontein and one hundred miles north of Fauresmith. Let any one who has one of Hall's maps of South Africa follow the western edge of the Vaal, immediately below the point of intersection he will see a great bend in the river. The fields are on both sides of the river, at the lowest secondary curve of that great bend. On the southeastern side is the Paniel Field, and on the northwestern side is the Klip Drift Field. Port Alfred is the nearest colonial port to the diamond fields, and Capetown is the most distant. From Grahamstown, whether by Cradock or Queenstown, the distance is by no means formidable. A party from the city accomplished the journey in a bullock wagon in eighteen days. We do not advise any one who lives 'at home at ease' to rush to the diamond diggings; but should the lottery prove as attractive at home as it has shown itself to be here, then it should be remembered that the nearest seaport to the fields is neither Capetown or Port Natal, but that Port Alfred and Port Elizabeth are much nearer, and that at either of these ports good accommodation is to be obtained."

MEN WHO TALK.—There is a prevalent opinion in the world that men who talk most, and are most brilliant in conversation are the men of greatest ability. There was never a greater error. It is almost universally the reverse.

There was Cornelle, who it is said came nearer resembling Shakespeare than any man of his day, who could take hold of a subject and reduce it in the most masterly manner to writing, while in conversation he was slow, and even butchered the King's English in the most shocking manner. There was Addison, whose purity of diction was without fault, and was the admiration of those among whom the English language was read and spoken. And yet that man was simply stupid in the social circle, almost dumb; so much so that his friends actually feared to bring him out, and when they did, blushed at his abominable errors.

Virgil, who sang of Tyrrhus in the beechen shade, and gave the world the Æneid, was as faulty in conversation as any totally illiterate.

La Bruyere, the celebrated poet, was so dull that a celebrated counsellor once told him that his silence was preferable to his conversation.

Isocrates, who charmed the people with his writings, was too modest to speak in public, and Dryden was so full of errors in common talk that he was actually ashamed of himself.

And the list might be prolonged. But whatever you do, never judge a man by his conversation. If you believe there is anything in him, seek him in his study alone, when the creature of his imagination are floating about him, and when his soul is baptized with the poetry of thought that is viable to himself alone.
