The Weather.

SANFRANCISCO, 16.—Rain commenced falling lightly this morning, and throughout the day occasional slight showers with a fresh wind, varying from south to west. The barometer is falling and indications favor more rain to-night. Reports from all parts of the State show that in the southern counties, San Diago, Los Angeles, San Luis, and Obispo rain is threatened, but none has yet fallen since that previously reported. The indications are that the present change in the weather will result in a general storm. If such prove the case, and rain falls copiously, good crops may be expected in all portions of the State, as it is only in a few limited localities that any serious consequences have as yet ensued from the drouth. The damage, such as it is, has been mostly confined to San Diego and these portions of Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys in the vicinity of Sacramento and Stockton.

Later dispatches indicates that the storm is spreading southward. It is raining throughout the southern counties this evening, as well as the central and northern parts of the State. Reports from all parts say the prospects are good for a continuance.

Mining Suit.

Legal proceeding were commenced, to-day, in the district court, Eureka, Nevada, by the Eureka Mining Co. against the Richmond Mining Co., to recover damages alleged to have been sustained by the encroachment of defendant upon the ground of the plaintiff. The exact amount at issue has not yet been ascertained, but the surveyor's report estimates the amount of ore taken from the plaintiff's ground at 40,000 tons, valued in the neighborhood of $2,500,000. The Richmond mine is owned by English capitalists.

Storing Grain.

SALT LAKE CITY,
Jan. 15, 1877.

Editor Deseret News:

As there is at the present time considerable discussion on the subject of "How shall we lay up wheat and other cereals, so that they will be preserved from decay and insects?" and this subject being of paramount importance, in view of the possible contingencies arising from the effects of war, grasshopper ravages, etc., in the near future, as well as the general counsel for all who can to store the several species of grain, and wheat especially, permit me to offer a few thoughts on this topic, of a natural, scientific if you will, kind, and some ancient methods of providing against a day of want.

There are three great agencies operating in all nature in the destruction as well also as in the organization of all vegetable and animal life forms, viz. heat, moisture and light. To the operation of these subtle forces is due nearly all the great changes that recur from season to season. Modify or control these forces and you have the key of the whole subject. Construct granaries impenetrable to moisture and unaffected by the heat of the sun or surrounding air, and cool, dry and dark, and no insect life can flourish in them, no parasitic life will grow, and the conditions thus secured, together with the conditions of dry soil for the land where the various grains grew and mixed copiously, completes the natural law or conditions for their preservation through long periods of time. This soil mixing among the grain does no injury, as it all escapes in the milling process.

Dig deeply in the alluvials of the earth the world over, and expose the soils from those depths to heat, moisture, and light, and in nearly all cases a vegetation essentially different to that found on the surface springs up. How is this? At some former epoch, what is now deep beneath the present level, was surface, and those new species of plants now presenting themselves, are the growth of the seeds at that period growing there. Again, the student of natural phenomena has often observed that the destruction of large forests of trees is frequently followed by the growth of vegetation, trees, shrubbery and grass of an entirely different genera from the previous ones. The experience of our farmers is to these facts also—weeds, sunflowers, and other vegetation growing on their lands where they did not grow before the plowing of the lands, showing the existence of fine delicate germs buried for ages. Take any soil in its natural condition, from the surface and often from depths of hundreds of feet, and view it by the microscope and it will be found full of vegetable seeds. Wonderful are nature's conservative powers.

Analogous to these facts are those of the wheat found in that stone box in southern Utah, and those of wheat taken from the wrapping of the embalmed bodies of the ancient Egyptians, perhaps placed there three or four thousand years ago, yet these grains remain sound and vegetate freely.

Joseph, the son of Jacob, in laying up stores of grain at the time immediately preceding the coming of his brethren to him in Egypt, according to ancient records, directed the storing of grain with the dry soils of the lands growing the grain, thus shewing himself to be well acquainted with the natural facts before mentioned.

Granaries constructed of good concrete of lime and gravel are perhaps as good materials and as cheap as any we know of. But to be a success they must be cool, dry, and dark, and care be taken that the building and contents, wheat and soil, are as dry as possible.

Respectfully,
OSMOND B. SHAW.

A NEW TRIBE OF INDIANS DISCOVERED.—A new tribe of aboriginal Indians has been discovered near the headwaters of the Brazos, who have been so quiet that even their existence has heretofore been unknown to the Government or any of the whites. They have never asked for ponies or blankets. Their tribe is called the "Plato," and they number about 500. They have been living with the Comanches, and have behaved like little men. Very recently, however, they have notified Col. Hatch that they desire to go to Wescalaro Agency, at Fort Stanton. They represent that they are very poor, and that if they are transferred it will be necessary to furnish them two or three weeks' rations of beef and a military escort. They are to be transferred and fed.—Denver News.
