How about all this?

We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all mon are Orealed equal; that they are endowed by their creator with certain inclinable rights; that among these are life liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that, whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness." "All experience hath shown that mannity. kind are more disposed to suffic, while cuils are sufferable, than to right themsaives by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a dusign to reduce them under absolute despatism, it is their right, it is their dwy, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security."

We should like to think that some governors, judges, and other persons to the voice of justice. It is only when invested with authority, were accustomed to "read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest" the text book of American government. But, judging from their actions, one could easily be led to entertain reasonsble doubts whether they ever read it in the course of their lives, so utterly do they appear to ignore not only its principles, but its express and fundamental provisions.

In the light of recent official occurrances, how can the citizens of Utah be considered "created equal," how "endowed with certain inalienable rights?" How can it be considered that governmant was instituted to "secure these rights?" What a mockery to say that the government as carried out here,"de- have just returned from a trip to Coal-
