LET THE LAW BE ENFORCED.

MUCH surprise is occasioned in this city by the turn which is being taken on the liquor question. The agreement understood to have been made between the county authorities and the whisky sellers did not in the discharge of their duty. The suit quite a number of the people, anything in the nature of a compro-despised and perhaps with some demise on this subject being distasteful to them. But others viewed the defied and combinations are entered matter in a different light, consider- into to prevent detection, is it not ing that the law would be vindicated and further difficulty avoided by this mutual understanding between the parties. However, it was generally supposed that the "compromise" by which the liquor dealviolated or evaded. ers agreed to pay the county a license fee of $800 per annum on condition that the suits against them be dropped, had no connection with or | earing upon the city dispute with the saloon keepers. Those and settled policy must be framed, who have watched the progress of affairs have expected the city to shiftings and subterfuges, and hupush its case until a final conclusion was reached. It is not doubted by tinues alive, it should be maintained sound lawyers and other business men that the absurd rulings of and supported by all who have any Judge Hunter, in relation to the part in its execution, or the City and its officers will be brought

The increase in the liquor traffic in this city, and its baneful effect upon public morals, some m nths ago became so apparent that strong measures for its curtailment were considered ab-olutely necessary for the general welfare. A petition with over seven thousand signatures was presented to the City Council, asking that the liquor traffic be furasking that the liquor traffic be further restricted, and that the hours in which it was allowed be shortened. The municipal authorities gave it favorable consideration and endeavored to act in accordance with the public wish as far as they thought it wisdom to proceed. The liquor dealers, or quite a number of them, entered into a combination to resist the law. In that resistance they were aided by the rulings of Judge Hunter, and hence the muddie that ensued, and the mixing up
