

MRS. BRADLEY'S BROWN CHILDREN

"I Acknowledge Arthur Brown And Martin Montgomery as my Children by Anna M. Bradley."

THE SENATOR WROTE THAT.

dated Feb. 10, 1905, and brought to light by Colonel Maurice M. Kaighn.

Washington, Nov. 21.—The story of former United States Senator Brown's acknowledgment of the paternity of the two youngest of Mrs. Bradley's children was told today in Judge Sullivan's court by other lips than hers. "I acknowledge Arthur Brown and Martin Montgomery as my children by Anna M. Bradley."

It was Mrs. Bradley's own method of acknowledging the paternity of the two youngest of her children, and the highest was inscribed on a small and folded piece of writing paper. It was dated Feb. 10, 1905, and was brought to light by Col. Maurice M. Kaighn, an attorney at Salt Lake City, the resident lawyer in the United States land office in that city, and a friend of Senator Brown of 30 years' standing. Col. Kaighn was on the witness stand for about an hour during the afternoon session of the Bradley trial, and testified that Mrs. Bradley brought the folded slip of paper to his office just after she received it from Brown with the ink still wet. She had taken it from his room, and how she learned with joy as she held the paper and told him that now all would be well.

Col. Kaighn related many interesting facts concerning his association with both Mrs. Bradley and Senator Brown, and, upon the whole, made by far the best witness for the little woman that has been called to the stand, herself excepted. He told of the first of the language of many dramatic interviews with Mrs. Bradley, and stated with the expression of opinion that she had become a monomaniac on the subject of her relationship to the senator.

He said he believed her mind to have been unbalanced. "I tried to do it," he said after he left the stand, "for Senator Brown was one of my most intimate friends, but one can not trifle with one's conscience."

Other testimony in Mrs. Bradley's behalf was given by Maj. Samuel A. King, who related many incidents going to show that Mrs. Bradley was in a very nervous condition at the time before coming to Washington. Some time before coming to Washington, he said, he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Exercise Care at This Season of the Year.

Take your cold in time. White Pine Expectorant relieves recent or chronic Coughs and Colds, Loss of Voice, etc. Every family should have a bottle handy—prevention is better than cure.

50c a bottle.

DRUG STORE
The Pure Drug Dispensary
112 - 114 South Main St.

Those Hot Drinks At our Fountain Are Appreciated.

Washington, Nov. 21.—The story of former United States Senator Brown's acknowledgment of the paternity of the two youngest of Mrs. Bradley's children was told today in Judge Sullivan's court by other lips than hers. "I acknowledge Arthur Brown and Martin Montgomery as my children by Anna M. Bradley."

It was Mrs. Bradley's own method of acknowledging the paternity of the two youngest of her children, and the highest was inscribed on a small and folded piece of writing paper. It was dated Feb. 10, 1905, and was brought to light by Col. Maurice M. Kaighn, an attorney at Salt Lake City, the resident lawyer in the United States land office in that city, and a friend of Senator Brown of 30 years' standing.

Col. Kaighn was on the witness stand for about an hour during the afternoon session of the Bradley trial, and testified that Mrs. Bradley brought the folded slip of paper to his office just after she received it from Brown with the ink still wet. She had taken it from his room, and how she learned with joy as she held the paper and told him that now all would be well.

Col. Kaighn related many interesting facts concerning his association with both Mrs. Bradley and Senator Brown, and, upon the whole, made by far the best witness for the little woman that has been called to the stand, herself excepted.

He told of the first of the language of many dramatic interviews with Mrs. Bradley, and stated with the expression of opinion that she had become a monomaniac on the subject of her relationship to the senator.

He said he believed her mind to have been unbalanced. "I tried to do it," he said after he left the stand, "for Senator Brown was one of my most intimate friends, but one can not trifle with one's conscience."

Other testimony in Mrs. Bradley's behalf was given by Maj. Samuel A. King, who related many incidents going to show that Mrs. Bradley was in a very nervous condition at the time before coming to Washington.

Some time before coming to Washington, he said, he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Jan. 21 he expressed confidence in winning in the divorce matter, and added: "I believe we will live together and enjoy each other all the better for the little troubles that now beset us."

Feb. 9: "If you marry me, I do not ask you to marry the rest of my relations. I certainly shall not like to have you. The experience of Clarence will not be repeated with me. * * * You can not do your duty to any husband or your children, until you are married. I thought that your sister must be first in everything. When they are married, they will put you away. My darling, my beloved, my own dear wife, don't let anything come between us."

On Feb. 4 he expressed a determination to see "madame," and said: "I am very much determined today to make all my life subservient to my devotion to you."

Feb. 17, he tells of a call upon Mrs. Brown. "She answered the bell," he said. "I said, 'I have only a moment. If you will excuse me, will you please come in, but if nothing else will answer will bring suit, etc.' She replied that she could not, would not, wanted to talk longer. I said, 'I must and here will bring suit, etc.' She replied that she could not, would not, wanted to talk longer. I said, 'I must and here will bring suit, etc.'"

On the same day he telegraphed: "Refuses. Will proceed and win. Don't doubt it."

On Feb. 19 he wrote an affectionate letter referring to Mrs. Bradley as "the mother of our child," and on the 20th said: "I will turn heaven and earth until I marry you."

On March 11, 1905, he expressed himself as follows to Mr. Kaighn: "God governs. I am his son. God and I will always be at your side, loving and protecting you. The more you love me, the more I love you. God knows I have never loved anything so much. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder for life. You are my own dear wife—mine, true love, and your gift divine."

On the same date he wrote her another letter and, speaking of their difficulties in court, said: "I do what I can in the midst of all this anguish of heart and brain. You must not think that I regret; I do not. I only think of the duty I owe you—the wrong I have done you and ours. I feel guilty that I am not always at your side protecting you from insult and injury. When I look back, what a different man I would have been if I had married first. In early manhood! How different you and I would have been had we met and both been free in 1890, and loved each other. I love you now as I love you. God knows I have never loved anything so much. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder for life. You are my own dear wife—mine, true love, and your gift divine."

On the same date he wrote her another letter and, speaking of their difficulties in court, said: "I do what I can in the midst of all this anguish of heart and brain. You must not think that I regret; I do not. I only think of the duty I owe you—the wrong I have done you and ours. I feel guilty that I am not always at your side protecting you from insult and injury. When I look back, what a different man I would have been if I had married first. In early manhood! How different you and I would have been had we met and both been free in 1890, and loved each other. I love you now as I love you. God knows I have never loved anything so much. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder for life. You are my own dear wife—mine, true love, and your gift divine."

On the same date he wrote her another letter and, speaking of their difficulties in court, said: "I do what I can in the midst of all this anguish of heart and brain. You must not think that I regret; I do not. I only think of the duty I owe you—the wrong I have done you and ours. I feel guilty that I am not always at your side protecting you from insult and injury. When I look back, what a different man I would have been if I had married first. In early manhood! How different you and I would have been had we met and both been free in 1890, and loved each other. I love you now as I love you. God knows I have never loved anything so much. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder for life. You are my own dear wife—mine, true love, and your gift divine."

On the same date he wrote her another letter and, speaking of their difficulties in court, said: "I do what I can in the midst of all this anguish of heart and brain. You must not think that I regret; I do not. I only think of the duty I owe you—the wrong I have done you and ours. I feel guilty that I am not always at your side protecting you from insult and injury. When I look back, what a different man I would have been if I had married first. In early manhood! How different you and I would have been had we met and both been free in 1890, and loved each other. I love you now as I love you. God knows I have never loved anything so much. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder for life. You are my own dear wife—mine, true love, and your gift divine."

On the same date he wrote her another letter and, speaking of their difficulties in court, said: "I do what I can in the midst of all this anguish of heart and brain. You must not think that I regret; I do not. I only think of the duty I owe you—the wrong I have done you and ours. I feel guilty that I am not always at your side protecting you from insult and injury. When I look back, what a different man I would have been if I had married first. In early manhood! How different you and I would have been had we met and both been free in 1890, and loved each other. I love you now as I love you. God knows I have never loved anything so much. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder for life. You are my own dear wife—mine, true love, and your gift divine."

On the same date he wrote her another letter and, speaking of their difficulties in court, said: "I do what I can in the midst of all this anguish of heart and brain. You must not think that I regret; I do not. I only think of the duty I owe you—the wrong I have done you and ours. I feel guilty that I am not always at your side protecting you from insult and injury. When I look back, what a different man I would have been if I had married first. In early manhood! How different you and I would have been had we met and both been free in 1890, and loved each other. I love you now as I love you. God knows I have never loved anything so much. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder for life. You are my own dear wife—mine, true love, and your gift divine."

On the same date he wrote her another letter and, speaking of their difficulties in court, said: "I do what I can in the midst of all this anguish of heart and brain. You must not think that I regret; I do not. I only think of the duty I owe you—the wrong I have done you and ours. I feel guilty that I am not always at your side protecting you from insult and injury. When I look back, what a different man I would have been if I had married first. In early manhood! How different you and I would have been had we met and both been free in 1890, and loved each other. I love you now as I love you. God knows I have never loved anything so much. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder for life. You are my own dear wife—mine, true love, and your gift divine."

On the same date he wrote her another letter and, speaking of their difficulties in court, said: "I do what I can in the midst of all this anguish of heart and brain. You must not think that I regret; I do not. I only think of the duty I owe you—the wrong I have done you and ours. I feel guilty that I am not always at your side protecting you from insult and injury. When I look back, what a different man I would have been if I had married first. In early manhood! How different you and I would have been had we met and both been free in 1890, and loved each other. I love you now as I love you. God knows I have never loved anything so much. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder for life. You are my own dear wife—mine, true love, and your gift divine."

On the same date he wrote her another letter and, speaking of their difficulties in court, said: "I do what I can in the midst of all this anguish of heart and brain. You must not think that I regret; I do not. I only think of the duty I owe you—the wrong I have done you and ours. I feel guilty that I am not always at your side protecting you from insult and injury. When I look back, what a different man I would have been if I had married first. In early manhood! How different you and I would have been had we met and both been free in 1890, and loved each other. I love you now as I love you. God knows I have never loved anything so much. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder for life. You are my own dear wife—mine, true love, and your gift divine."

On the same date he wrote her another letter and, speaking of their difficulties in court, said: "I do what I can in the midst of all this anguish of heart and brain. You must not think that I regret; I do not. I only think of the duty I owe you—the wrong I have done you and ours. I feel guilty that I am not always at your side protecting you from insult and injury. When I look back, what a different man I would have been if I had married first. In early manhood! How different you and I would have been had we met and both been free in 1890, and loved each other. I love you now as I love you. God knows I have never loved anything so much. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder for life. You are my own dear wife—mine, true love, and your gift divine."

On the same date he wrote her another letter and, speaking of their difficulties in court, said: "I do what I can in the midst of all this anguish of heart and brain. You must not think that I regret; I do not. I only think of the duty I owe you—the wrong I have done you and ours. I feel guilty that I am not always at your side protecting you from insult and injury. When I look back, what a different man I would have been if I had married first. In early manhood! How different you and I would have been had we met and both been free in 1890, and loved each other. I love you now as I love you. God knows I have never loved anything so much. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder for life. You are my own dear wife—mine, true love, and your gift divine."

On the same date he wrote her another letter and, speaking of their difficulties in court, said: "I do what I can in the midst of all this anguish of heart and brain. You must not think that I regret; I do not. I only think of the duty I owe you—the wrong I have done you and ours. I feel guilty that I am not always at your side protecting you from insult and injury. When I look back, what a different man I would have been if I had married first. In early manhood! How different you and I would have been had we met and both been free in 1890, and loved each other. I love you now as I love you. God knows I have never loved anything so much. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder for life. You are my own dear wife—mine, true love, and your gift divine."

Judge Powers asked her how she felt when she became aware that her relations with Brown had gotten to the ears of Mrs. Brown. "I wanted to go away immediately," she answered. "I was begging him to send me away."

"Had he said anything to you on the subject of what you should do or say in the event of his wife talking with you?" "He immediately sent a messenger to me. I threatened to go, and he sent word to me instantly not to say anything and to deny everything."

A letter of 1905, from the same farm, was quoted at length. Mrs. Bradley closed it by asserting that the divorce she and Senator Brown had brought on themselves would leave a scar on her life and said she would give half the pleasure she expected to obtain through a proper life with Brown to efface the humiliating past.

LEATHER WHIP EXHIBITED
A leather whip which Mrs. Bradley brought to Washington in her trunk last December was exhibited to the jury. She said the senator had given it to her, and she did not know who had it with her.

"Had you any intention of using it on the senator?" she was asked. "At the house on Brigham street," she said. "We were there the one time up that were shown yesterday and which were shown together."

Mrs. Bradley was then finally excused. DR. C. W. WHITNEY TESTIFIES.
This afternoon Mrs. Bradley's Salt Lake physician, Dr. C. W. Whitney, was introduced to corroborate Mrs. Bradley's statements concerning criminal operations performed on her and to testify about her health during her intimacy with Brown.

The doctor said Mrs. Bradley first visited his office in 1902, and that Brown accompanied her. When Mr. Powers sought to bring out the conversation between himself and Senator Brown, Dr. Whitney objected. The objection was sustained and the witness was excused for the time.

COL. S. A. KING.
Samuel A. King, an attorney at Salt Lake, testified that he knew Senator Brown intimately and also knew Mrs. Bradley. He said he was the brother of Judge William H. King, who had been referred to in the testimony.

He said that he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

The witness recalled that in the spring of 1905 Mrs. Bradley called on him in good spirits and presented him a paper, saying, "Arthur has acknowledged the children and we are to be married."

This paper was presented and Mr. Kaighn identified it. "Did you observe Mrs. Bradley's face when she signed hold of your desk?" "Yes, her face was alternately flushed and pale; her voice was shrill and her hands trembled. Two or three times she gave a strange laugh and was hysterical, nervous."

Witness thought there was a noticeable progress in her hysteria after that interview. Mr. Kaighn told at another interview with Mrs. Bradley, when she came into his office in a state of collapse, and said: "I am going to end all this. I can't endure it any longer. I am going to take my own life. Arthur is cruel and says he will never do anything for me and I have nothing to live for."

"I demonstrated and tried to cheer her up," said Mr. Kaighn. "She said, 'No, it's no use. I am going to do it.' She handed me a deed and told me to give it to her sister when she was gone. I asked her if she had seen Arthur, and she replied, 'Yes, I've just left him and I'll never see him again.' She added: 'I hope my death will cause him to be kind to the children.'"

"I was so much impressed with what she said," said the witness, "that I went to see Senator Brown. I had several interviews and said he had had a hundred or more with her."

The witness was present at an interview in 1906 between Brown and Mrs. Bradley, in which Brown, at first stately and disagreeable, said afterward: "Dolly, you know I love you and I want to do right by you. You know my difficulties. He assured her, putting his arm around her, that 'I will redeem my pledges and make you a happy woman.'"

His face beamed," continued the witness, "and after the senator left she phoned around and exclaimed: 'Oh, Colonel, it is all right.'"

As Mr. Bradley's mental condition, Mr. Kaighn said: "I thought then that while she was not absolutely insane, her mental condition was disturbed. She could not think logically or coherently, especially on the subject of Brown and the children. She was a monomaniac on that subject."

Mr. Turner, who conducted the cross-examination, asked: "Do you think her mind was diseased on the subject of Brown?" "It was a little colored on that subject," he replied.

At this reply Mrs. Bradley broadly smiled. "At any time did you regard her as dangerous?" "It was at that stage that I thought she would become dangerous, and I told Senator Brown that she was mentally affected, she was liable to become violent and might do him harm."

After she threatened suicide Mr. Kaighn told Mr. Brown that he must go to see the woman, adding that by so doing he would save a life. "That night I saw them on the street together," said the witness.

MRS. BRADLEY LAUGHS.
The conclusion caused general laughter in the courtroom. Mrs. Bradley joined in it, and Mr. Kaighn, assistant attorney-general of Utah, testified to appearing for both Brown and Mrs. Bradley at the time of their arrest for bigamy. The witness said he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

Mrs. Bradley called him to her room, and she had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator, and he had been called to the office of the senator.

GLISSMEYER & CO., Tailors
221 So. W. Temple. Bell 3810 k.
Suits made to order at reasonable prices. Wide ranging prices. Fit or no sale.
FIRST CLASS WORKMANSHIP

CLAYTON MUSIC COMPANY
Utah's Leading Music House
109-111-113 MAIN STREET.

RUBBER.
We have a fresh and very large supply of rubber goods just in. Look and see if your water bottle leaks. A defective hot water bottle is worse than none.
Come in and see our line of fountain syringes, hot water bottles, rubber caps, etc.

GODBE-PITTS DRUG CO.
Where you get the A. D. S. Prescriptions.
Phones No. 110.

"That Good Coal"
BAMBERGER,
161 Melhorn Street.

THE STATE BANK OF UTAH
Salt Lake City, Utah.
Established 1863.
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

UTAH NATIONAL BANK,
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

National Bank of the Republic
U. S. DEPOSITORY.
JAMES A. McHUGH, Vice President.
W. F. KAHN, President.
A thorough modern service department. A complete modern service department. A complete modern service department.

Utah Commercial & Savings Bank.
W. F. KAHN, President.
Commercial Banking in all its branches. Four per cent interest paid on savings deposits.
ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.

DESERET NATIONAL BANK,
Salt Lake City, Utah.
Capital $1,000,000.00.
Surplus $1,000,000.00.
L. S. HILL, President.
J. E. KAHN, Vice President.
A. H. KAHN, Cashier.
W. H. KAHN, Assistant Cashier.
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

Commercial National Bank.
An Export of Corporation Company.
A. H. KAHN, President.
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

McCormick & Co., BANKERS.
SALT LAKE CITY - UTAH.
Established 1863.
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

WALKER BROS., BANKERS.
(Incorporated).
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

R. G. Dun & Co.
THE MERCANTILE AGENCY.
George R. Dun, President.
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

Leyson Time
Phone 85 for the Correct Time.
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

MOVE THE BOWLS AND WORK OFF A COUGH
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

WATCH FOR THE
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

Announcement
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

BIG FIVE DAYS SALE
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

The Ensign Knitting Co.
30-32 RICHARDS ST.
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

THE STATE BANK OF UTAH
Salt Lake City, Utah.
Established 1863.
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

UTAH NATIONAL BANK,
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.
Suits accounts of Banks, firms and individuals, and extends to customers every reasonable courtesy and facility.

National Bank of the Republic
U. S. DEPOSITORY.
JAMES A. McHUGH, Vice President.
W. F. KAHN, President.
A thorough modern service department. A complete modern service department. A complete modern service department.

Utah Commercial & Savings Bank.
W. F. KAHN, President.
Commercial Banking in all its branches. Four per cent interest paid on savings deposits.
ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.

DESERET NATIONAL BANK,
Salt Lake City, Utah.
Capital $1,000,000.00.
Surplus $1,000,000.00.
L. S. HILL, President.
J. E. KAHN, Vice President.