

LET TO-MORROW TAKE CARE OF TO-MORROW.

Let tomorrow take care of tomorrow; Leave the future to fate; What's the use of anticipating sorrow; Life's troubles come never too late. If to hope overmuch be an error, 'Tis one that the wise have preferred; And how often have hearts been in terror Of evils that never occurred.

Have faith, and thy faith shall sustain thee; Permit not suspicion and care With invisible bonds to enchain thee; But bear what God gives thee to bear. By His Spirit supported and gladdened, Be never by forebodings deterred; But think how oft hearts have been saddened By fear of what never occurred.

Let tomorrow take care of tomorrow; Short and dark as our life may appear, We may make it still darker by sorrow; Still shorter by folly and fear. Half our troubles are half our inventions, And how often from blessings conferred,

LOSS AND GAIN.

(By Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler.) I sorrowed that the golden day was dead, Its light no more the countryside adorning; But whilst I grieved, behold! the east grew red With morning.

I sighed that merry spring was forced to go, And doff the wreaths that did so well become her; But whilst I murmured at her absence, lo— 'Twas summer.

I mourned because the daffodils were killed By burning skies that scorched my early posies; But whilst for these I pined, my hands were filled With roses.

Half broken-hearted I bewailed the end Of friendship, then which none had once seemed near; But whilst I woe I found a newer friend, And dearer.

And thus I learned old pleasures are estranged; Only that something better may be given; Until at last we find this earth exchanged For heaven.

NOTES.

A new book by the author of Woe Macgregor, entitled Ethel, will be published by Harper & Brothers shortly. Mr. Bell has told this story without any dialect, and entirely in dialogues between Ethel and her fiancé, Ethel, who is a captivating Scottish girl, has old little points of view, and dangles in her cheeks. She is portrayed with the same fresh and natural skill which has made Woe Macgregor famous over several continents, and so well known in Great Britain that Mr. Bell figured the other day on a list of guests of the New Vagabond Club as "Woe Macgregor."

The tremendous popularity of Woe Macgregor in Great Britain is evident

Mrs. Fairbanks tells how neglect of warning symptoms will soon prostrate a woman. She thinks woman's safeguard is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Ignorance and neglect are the same of old female suffering, not only with the loss of health but with the chance of a cure. I did not heed the warnings of headaches, organic pains and general weariness, until I was well nigh prostrated. I knew I had to do something. Happily I did the right thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound faithfully according to directions, and was rewarded in a few weeks to find that my aches and pains disappeared, and I again felt the glow of health through my body. Since I have been well I have been more careful. I have also advised a number of my sick friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they have never had reason to be sorry. Yours truly, Mrs. MARY FAIRBANKS, 216 South 7th St., Minneapolis, Minn." Arthur Stanwood Pier, the author of the novel of the oil fields, "The Triumph," just published by Macmillan & Co., is one of the many whom the strenuous literature has beguiled from their chosen profession. There is probably no novelist living whose familiarity with novels began so late as did Shan F. Bullock. Writers of novels are usually the most voracious readers of them, and behind every novelist's work extends a romance reading habit leading back into the days of childhood and to the nursery. Mr. Bullock was almost a full-grown man before he ever opened a novel, was nineteen years of age, in fact. "In my father's house," says Mr. Bullock, in explanation, "novel reading was unknown and forbidden. The strict Puritanism of such north Ireland heroes as mine is almost incredible, but it is the usual—not the uncommon thing—was only after having departed from the paternal roof, and having enrolled himself as a student in King's College, London, that he had the opportunity to do as he liked in the matter of reading. "I shall never forget how I read in those days," he says. "I read continuously every spare moment. George Eliot's works made the greatest impression on me. I can never forget how I enjoyed 'Adam Bede.' That came first of all. I have been reading George Eliot recently, but you may be sure not with the same pleasure. Time seems to have robbed her work of some of its charm."

The efforts of Prof. Simon Newcomb, of John Hopkins University, author of the popular book on astronomy, "Astronomy for Everybody," have been enlisted to make the scientific side of the St. Louis Exposition a success. During the year of this fair, an International Congress of Science will be held in St. Louis, and Prof. Newcomb has been sent to France as the official representative of the exposition, to arouse interest in the congress among the scientists of France, and secure their attendance and co-operation. He sailed for Europe the latter part of May.

BOOKS.

Romance, beauty and charm of style are said to be the prominent characteristics of Mr. James Lane Allen's new book, The Mistle of the Pasture. The author has left the field of The Reign of Law and has gone back to the genius and the atmosphere of his early successes. Those who cared for The Kentucky Cardinal and Aftermath will relish greatly this new story; but with the charm and the sweetness and the delicious magnetism of these two tales are mingled stronger and more virile qualities. Isabel, the heroine, is memorably described: "As she strolled around the garden, under the cloudy flush of the evening sky, dressed in white, a shawl of white lace over one arm, a rose on her breast, she had the exqu岸tiness of a long past, during which women have been chosen in marriage for health and beauty and children, and the power to charm. The very curve of her neck implied generations of mothers who had valued grace. Generations of forefathers had impaled her walk and bearing, their courage and their pride. The perfection of the eyebrows, the chiseled perfection of the nostril, the loveliness of the short red lip, the well-arched feet, small, but sure of themselves, the eyes that were kind, the forehead, and thoughtful the when of her hair, the fluency of her skin, her nobly cast figure—all these were evidences of descent from a people that had reached in her purity, without having lost the vigor of one of the highest types. The Macmillan company will publish Mr. Allen's book on June 24."

Round Anvil Rock, the new novel upon which Mrs. Nancy Weston Banks has been at work since the publication of Oldfield, will be published by the Macmillan company on or about the end of June. The time of the new story is nearer the beginning of the last century than that of the first story of Mrs. Banks, who, going back nearly a hundred years, has found romantic material indeed. At this period and in this part of Kentucky were enacted some of the fiercest and wildest dramas which the world ever saw. But Round Anvil Rock is not in the least like an historical novel. It is an imaginative work, and much more of a story than Oldfield. Well-known names come and go through its pages incidentally to the narrative; nature has been appealed to solely for the story's atmosphere. It is a study of the home life, the characters, and the distinctive traits of the first Kentuckians, but all its mystery, misery, and happiness center in a love story.

On June 1, 1893, one week after the birth of Emerson, William Ellery Channing called Emerson's star of the American Church. He was installed as minister of the Federal Street church in Boston, and began the great public career which during the following 40 years so profoundly affected American religion, politics and society. On June 1 of the present year, the centennial day, a statue of Channing was dedicated in Boston. The American Peace society was just celebrated in Boston the 75th anniversary of its founding. The American Peace society was the outgrowth of the Massachusetts Peace society, founded 13 years before, in 1815. This society, the first influential peace society in the world, which owes its original impulse to Rev. Noah Worcester, was organized in Channing's study, in the parsonage house of the parish; and Channing was "its life and soul." Channing's life was a long war against war. Above all men in pulpits did he expose the evils and wrongs of the military system. The best of his addresses and sermons upon war and the true peace and wisdom of nations are in a volume entitled "Discourses on War" brought together, carefully edited and accompanied by a thoughtful introduction by Edwin D. Mead. No volume could be published at this time better calculated to bring home to our preachers and churches their duties in this most important cause. The words spoken by Channing half a century ago have lost none of their force and have direct and often startling application to the problems and temptations of today. —Ginn and Co., Publishers.

TO HER PHOTOGRAPH.

Sit here, and let me talk to you, And gaze into your eyes, And drink, with greedy pleasure, Of the love that therein lies. Let me press my lips to thine, And yet, you're but a photograph, Of her who should be mine.

Ah, yes, you're but a photograph, A dead, unknowing thing, And yet around your loving face, What recollections cling! Do you recall the morning, When the last good-bye was said? As the train sped swiftly from me, And all the world seemed dead?

She was standing on the platform, And as she waved adieu, She left me in the world alone! Yet ne—for I had you, Then "her" letter, you remember, Came with cheering words of love, Sweet words could not be spoken By an angel from above.

How we've thought and planned to gether, For the future, you and I! How you've shared my every sorrow, Every headache, every sigh! And as sadness o'er me stealing, Makes such torturing doubts arise, All fears are lulled to rest, dear, When I look into your eyes.

Had I honor, fame or riches, Or could I a monarch be, I'd sooner lose them all, dear, Than I would part with thee. So you more good-bye kiss, dear, Watch o'er me through the night, And greet me in the morning, With your loving smile so bright. —G. P.

DOCTORS DISAGREE EACH GAVE MRS. BREWEN'S TROUBLE A DIFFERENT NAME. None Helped Her, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cured Her When Her Case Was Thought Hopeless.

Prejudice and scepticism, however sincere, must give way before an honest presentation of facts and any readers who may have hesitated to test the virtues of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People owe it to themselves to seriously consider a statement that is attested solely by a desire to help others.

"I suffered with stomach trouble for three years," says Mrs. A. H. Brewen, 402 North Sargent avenue, Joplin, Mo. "I had three doctors at different times. One of them said my trouble was indigestion, the second said it was gastritis and the third pronounced it cancer of the stomach. None of them did me any good. At one time I was confined to my bed for nearly three months. Many of my friends thought I would never get better and I began to think as myself."

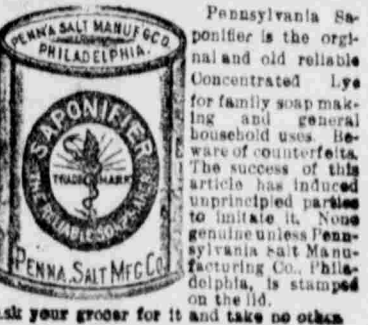

"I had a headache pretty much all the time and suffered continually with a burning pain in my stomach. Sometimes I could hardly get my breath. My stomach would retain food but a few minutes and I frequently vomited quite a lot of blood. My condition had become alarming when a friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and gave me some that he had left after she was cured. They seemed to help me and I bought another box. Before they were gone I was on the road to recovery. I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to several of my friends and neighbors and am glad of this opportunity to tell other what the pills have done for me."

Any reader who is suffering from stomach trouble, indigestion, or a copy of Dr. Williams' diet book, entitled "What to Eat and How to Eat," is free whether you try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or not, and it has helped many people to get their health and vigor, or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, fifty cents a box, or six boxes for two dollars and fifty cents, by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

BIGELOW CARPETS

The Carpets made by this Company have received the highest award wherever exhibited, including Gold Medals at the Paris Exposition, 1878, and at the Centennial, 1876. Their deserved reputation for excellence of fabric, richness and durability of color, novelty and beauty of design, has led to frequent infringements, and inferior goods have often been palmed off in their stead. For the protection of the public the Company has adopted as a trade-mark the word "BIGELOW," which will be woven (at every repeat of the pattern) in white capitals into the back of the fabric. Customers will therefore have merely to examine the back of a carpet to be certain that they are getting the genuine Bigelow Carpets. These goods can be obtained from all first-class dealers.
