Financially and morally, war is one of the greatest calamities that can befall any people. It loads a nation with rapidly heaped up debt, and panders to all the vices.

Four years of war brought this nation a debt that exceeded, by nearly one-third, the entire expenditure of the Federal government stealing. for the preceding whole term of its existence, nearly three-fourths Thomas Slight, of the 16th Ward, of a century, and caused it to pay, in one year, an amount of interest, on that debt, equal to the total annual expenditure of the government immediately previous to the outbreak of the war. The credit of the government became terribly impaired, suffering a ruinous depreciation, from which it has not yet recovered, for its currency yet ments in an objectionable commuruns about ten per cent below par. | nication, in a city paper recently, It is not "as good as gold" in the concerning the family of Mr. Fife, estimation of the commercial world, as Mr. L. considered was implied frightfully cheaper. This has been the common experience since the Federal Government set the vicious example of multiplied expenditure and consequent heavy debt.

The war induced extravagant speculations, extravagant expenditures, and extravagant liabilities. Shoddy assumed silks and satins, reveled in diamonds and lived in princely style. "Honest labor" and the legitimate proceeds thereof became matters of contempt to many, who had come to consider speculation, rich "strikes," and official perquisites and mis-appropriations the only ways of obtaining a livelihood worthy of men of talent and ambition. Thus official corruption and general demoralization prevailed, "everybody" felt like indulging in unusual expenses, until the inflated bubbles burst, and the Brother Allen Taylor, formerly penditure for the fiscal year ending day of reckoning came as a thief in Bishop of Kaysville, who had just June 30, 1860, was seventy-seven the night, in the shape of a finan- arrived from Washington, Kane millions.
