

CAPTAIN BARRATT CALLED

Veteran Sportsman and Merchant Succumbs to Brief Illness at His Salt Lake Home.

Captain Isaac Milton Barratt has been called home. His death came quite suddenly and unexpectedly at 3:40 p. m., yesterday, at his home, 437 east Second South street, from pneumonia, after a sickness of hardly a week. Thus departs from human field of view one of the best known and popular of Salt Lake's citizens. Funeral arrangements will not be made until the arrival of his son, George W. Barratt, the illustrator artist from New York. Captain Barratt was born in Baltimore, Md., 64 years ago. At the age of 24 stories he had frequently heard of "golden opportunities in the west" induced him to cast his fortunes in that direction so in 1868, the young man obeyed the oft repeated injunction of Horace Greeley: "Go west, young man, go west." He first located in Corinne where he conducted for a short time, a merchandizing establishment. But removed to Salt Lake which was then developing from the status of a country village into a town of some pretensions. His brother,

C. R. Barratt, was already here, and the two went into the furniture business, occupying later what was the old Salt Lake house on Main street where the Progress building now stands. Sharp competition, however, induced them to give up the furniture business after having been in it for 20 years. C. R. Barratt was made postmaster of this city by President Cleveland, and died from pneumonia some 13 years ago. Captain Barratt was manager for a number of years of the Garfield Bathing resort, and when that place went out of commission, he became manager of the Western Arms company, which position he filled creditably for seven years. A year ago, however, the concern changed hands, and after resigning he was given charge of the bowling alleys and other features at Vandamere for the past season. Two weeks ago the captain was made manager of the Bear River Duck club, where he immediately went to take charge. But owing to sudden changes in the weather, he caught cold. No particular attention was paid to it at first, but it presently attacked his lungs which were not strong, and two days ago, it was evident something must be done. Attorney Bradley who was on the grounds, had the sick man sent to this city yesterday in charge of Dr. Hardy of Brigham, and in conformance with Captain Barratt's request, the latter was taken to his home. Instead of a hospital. The unfortunate man immediately began to sink until the end came at the hour stated. Captain Barratt was never a wealthy man, but he always had enough to keep him comfortably. He was a great lover of out door sports, particularly hunting and fishing, in which he was a recognized expert, so that hardly any event or not in these spheres occurred without his being more or less interested. He was a member of the Salt Lake Gun club, and held official positions in the Salt Lake Rowing club as long as that organization remained in active existence, taking in active part in the numerous regattas which were held on the great lake while the boating fever existed. Captain Barratt was a good outdoorsman, a crack shot, and expert fisherman, and intensely interested in all athletic events. He was also an excellent forest guide. As a game warden he gave the state conspicuous service, receiving however no salary. The deceased was a widower, his wife dying in 1884, and he seems to have been one of the men who love one woman in life, and can love none other.

It was learned last evening that young Peters was married but had not been living with his wife for some time. Mrs. Peters says that they were married in Ogden about seven years ago and lived happily, until Peters began drinking, then their domestic troubles began and resulted in a separation. Mrs. Peters says she saw her husband last Friday and that he was in the company of a friend who said he would take care of the young man and get him a job. Peters then began drinking heavily and had an attack of delirium tremens. He was taken to the city jail, and, according to Chief Pitt and Jailer Wilkinson, was neglected by the county physicians. A reporter notified members of the Eagles lodge and they sent a physician to care for Peters. The dead man has five brothers residing at Cheyenne and they have been notified of his death.

J. W. PETERS DEAD.

J. W. Peters, the young man who was ill at the police station for two days, practically without medical attention, and who was removed to the Holy Cross hospital Wednesday, died at that institution last night at 11 o'clock.
