THEATRICAL.—Last night a crowded house witnessed the first presentation of "No Body's Child." The drama was in every way successful. It was put upon the stage in unexceptionable style; the scenery was effective, and the playing was very good. The principal characters in the play are Mr. Peter Grice, Lazouby, Lucy and Patty, sustained respectively by Mr. Waldron, Mr. Lindsay, Mr. McKenzie, Mrs. Waldron and Miss Adams.

As a sensation drama it is one of the most effective we have seen; and it possesses much more literary merit than sensation dramas usually do. The fairy well scene, with the business which occurs at it; the ravine, with the thrilling descent of Joe after the will, his deadly danger and heroic rescue by Patty; and the closing scenes in Miss Tregarson's bed-chamber and adjacent room, where the death struggle with Joe and Lazouby occurs, and the villain meets his deserved fate from Lucy's well-aimed shot, were received by the audience with demonstrative bursts of applause. The whole of the characters were well filled; and the piece ought to have a successful run this month, were times good; as it is, we hope it will soon be repeated.

Mr. D. E. Kimball performed his gymnasie act, and "Leap for Life," in a very neat and artistic manner, and was loudly applauded.

Mr. Brown volunteered a dance, though his name was not on the bill, and showed that he could dance, though he did not weary the house by prolonging it too extensively.

To-morrow night Mr. Waldron presents another most attractive programme for his Benefit, when he will make his last appearance but two. Shakespear's great tragedy of "King Lear" will be presented for the first time, Mr. Waldron appearing as the outraged old monarch, whom grief has bereft of reason. It will be followed by a new gymnastic act by Mr. Kimball; and the pretty one-act comedy, "The First Night," will conclude, Mr. Waldron playing Achille Talma Dufus. In this character he took the house by storm on the only previous occasion on which it has been played here, over two years ago. His drum act was an astonisher. We look for a crowded house, for the bill is most attractive, and the casts embrace the strength and talent of the company.

FROM ENGLAND.—We have been favored with the perusal of a letter from Elder Edward A. Nobles to his father, Joseph B. Nobles, of Hounslow, written from Cheltenham, England. The writer is on a mission to Britain, and manifests in his correspondence the possession of much trust and confidence in the Lord, with a vivid remembrance of the teachings received from his father before being called to go on his mission. He offers some good counsel to his brothers and former associates, advising them to improve their time and their minds by studying good books. He speaks of the success attending his labors in encouraging terms, and is enjoying himself in them. Such communications show the spirit which animates our young men when they are called to bear the gospel, and speak loudly for their integrity and faith in the work of God.

POLICE.—Yesterday afternoon, J. R. Pettit was brought before Alderman Clinton charged with petty larceny, and the charge being sustained, he was fined $25, but failing to pay, he was ornamented with city jewelry for the same day.

FROM WEBER.—We had the pleasure of meeting Bishop C. W. West this afternoon, who, during a brief conversation stated that the new survey west of Ogden, is being rapidly taken up, and the canal cut last Fall, which is 15 feet at bottom, 28 feet at top, and over 5 miles in length, will water about 10,000 acres of it.

Another canal is also being cut, to water a further portion.

CALLED.—We were honored with a visit today from our worthy contemporary, the Editor of the Keep-fit-Pitchin'. The paper is not as large as a triple thunderer, but it deals hard knocks on sore spots, and the worthy Professor and member of our Board of Regents, who edits it, has our best wishes for its success. May he long continue to dispense the sweets of life! Call again Pro !

RUSHING.—The way the rush is made for new towns on the railroad track, as it comes westward, is thus described by the Editor:

We learn that everybody in Dale City is rushing breathlessly to Wyoming, the new city on the railroad. The uncertainty connected with the time of a permanent enclosure from that condemned city is creating confusion and consternation, and concentrating all the calamities connected with the consuming characteristics of want of confidence in our fellow creatures. Boarders have not got to bed for fear their landlords will have to move to the next night without allowing them an opportunity of paying their bills; when a man takes a drink he is compelled to take the bar and counter gone before he has a chance to get it. He will purchase a decent suit or clothing before he might be shipped on the road while "new city" is still a "hot potato" come to the base use of adopting greedy savages. The miners are unable to dispose of the latest style of hats as the ladies all contemplate the possibility of different fashions in the "new city" to which they are going. Houses are abandoned and tents are erected in the rear of the houses for erecting them in the "new city" before the excitement is over and the railroad passes. The market is in an unsettled condition—real estate is cheap, dirt-roads are rising—horses active—spurs, diamond-headed, are rising—boots and shoes go off lively—whilst the dray and agricultural implements run into the ground—chain-hoist tools do—work slow—railroad about advancing rapidly—Dale City out of market and everybody going to Wyoming.

Died:

In Grantsville, April 21st, 1868, Daniel M. Brown, son of Alfred and Henrietta Ann E. Brown, aged 35 years, 9 months and 17 days.

David Woodbury, of Coopersburg, Hancock Co., Ill., July 4th, 1861, and has ever since been a member of the people of God. He emigrated with the Saints to Utah in 1860, and has been a resident of Grantsville for years. He leaves a wife and two children, and many friends, to mourn his death. (C.W.)

In this city, on the 1st inst., Phoebe Kingman Purcell, wife of Jeremiah Woodbury, Litchfield Co., Conn., July 28th, 1878; she was baptised by Pres.
