

FROM THRONES TO EXILE.

Notable Leaders of Insurrection Who Have Been Deposed by Britain—Making Banishment Easy—Huge Incomes Allotted to Former Sovereigns Who Were "Retired" Into Private Life.

The history of Great Britain is replete with cases of a similar nature to that raised by the capture of Aguinaldo. Throughout the course of her colonial campaigns at frequent and irregular intervals the same problem as to the future disposition of a conquered chieftain has arisen to embarrass "the mother country" as is now confronting this government and causing a considerable period of mature deliberation on the part of the administration. The fate that should be meted out to conquered rulers—of both political potentates and military leaders—always has proved a vexatious question and one that has been met in diverse and various ways. Transportation of Aguinaldo to tional sums of money. This was largely spent in keeping snake mounds, menageries and maintaining similar forms of entertainment for his royal delectation. He was fond of parading in gorgeous array through the streets of the Indian city. Soon after his semi-captivity was effected his queen and the Prince of Oudh and party went to London to appeal for adoption of a different policy toward him. While on this mission his queen died in Paris in January, 1858, and the prince in London a month later.

The Zulu war in South Africa is estimated to have cost the British government almost $25,000,000, but Cetewayo, the king of the Zulus, was held for a while as a prisoner by the British and subsequently assisted by the British in his efforts to regain the throne. He was defeated at Ulundi by the British on proclaimed a king again. He surrendered in October, escaped and was captured by the British in January, 1884. He died of heart disease. His son, Dinizulu, was crowned king by the Zulus before 10,000 people and was granted amnesty after promising fidelity to Great Britain.

The King of Delhi, old Bahadur Shah, the last of the line of great Mughuls, was captured in the British assault on the City of Delhi on September 14, 1857, and after a trial, lasting a month and a half, on the charge of high treason, was sentenced as a state prisoner to "transportation." He was sent aboard a ship to the Cape of Good Hope, in December, 1858. The colonists there refused to receive him, and he was finally sent to Hongkong. There, in a small hut, this potentate, the lineal descendant of Shah Jehan and Aurangzeb, passed the remaining years of his life in obscurity and poverty. Both his sons had been slaughtered in the fall of Delhi.

Tanta Topee, who headed a division of rebels in June, 1858, in India, and a rebel leader claimed to have been less culpable than Bahadur Shah, met a worse fate. He fought the British desperately, was beaten at Guzerat and other points, hemmed in and deserted by his troops and finally captured in April, 1859. He was executed on the gallows eleven days later.

Maharajah Dhuleep Singh, the favorite of the Maharanees, was exiled to England when his state in 1849, was formally annexed to British dominion. He was "requested" to take up his residence in England, with a yearly income of $240,000 from the British, and he wisely acquiesced. There was no other course, however, open to him. Once in England, he purchased an estate in Norfolk, where he resided for many years practically in the position of a wealthy English country gentleman. Frequently he expressed a desire to revisit his native country, professing absolute loyalty to the British sovereign, but he was never permitted to travel east of the Isthmus of Suez. His sons entered the British army, and one of them, Prince Victor, married the daughter of the Earl of Coventry, but neither has been allowed to go to the land over which their ancestors wielded the scepter.

Prior to the formal annexation of the Punjab, Moolraj Singh, ruler of the Sikhs, had treacherously murdered Mr. Vans Agnew and Lieutenant Anderson, Englishmen. Several conflicts with the British followed close upon these murders, and the Sikhs were beaten and Moolraj city taken in January, 1849, after a protracted siege. Moolraj was sentenced to death in the following August. The sentence was commuted to transportation for life.—Washington Star.

ABOUT KISSING MOTHER.

It was Eli Perkins who put the following reproof of a careless daughter into a father's mouth:

"I want to speak to you of your mother. It may be that you noticed a careworn look on her face. Of course, it has not been brought there by any act of yours; still it is your duty to chase it away. I want you to get up in the morning and get breakfast. When your mother comes and begins to express her surprise, go right up to her and kiss her on the mouth. You can't imagine how it will brighten her dear face."

"Besides, you owe her a kiss or two. Away back when you were a little girl she kissed you when no one else was tempted by your fever-tainted breath and swollen face; you were not as attractive then as you are now. Through years of childish sunshine and shadows she was always ready to cure by the magic of a mother's kiss, the little, dirty, chubby hands whenever they were injured in those first skirmishes with the rough world. And then the mid-night kisses with which she routed so many bad dreams, as she leaned above your restless pillow have all been on interest these long years."

"Of course, she is not so pretty and kissable as you are, but if you had done your share of the work during the past ten years the contrast would not be so marked. Her face has more wrinkles than yours; and yet if you're sick that face would appear more beautiful than an angel's as it hovered over

JIM CORBETT READY TO SAIL.

James J. Corbett of fistic fame is on his way to Europe to show the Kaiser and King Edward VII how to deliver a solar plexus blow. He goes to the emperor first by special appointment.

VERA CORBETT WILL TAKE NO CHANCES.

The latest rumor states that Vera Corbett, the pretty wife of James J., goes abroad with her husband because she is determined that there shall be no scandal this time in connection with her husband's trip. Whether her husband will present her to "his friends the emperor and the king" remain to be seen.

4, 1873, and was captured after a long pursuit on August 23, following. He was taken to Cape Town in September, whence he sent several petitions to the queen for restitution of his domain. He was held a prisoner for many years at Ghom. Later, in 1882, he was allowed to proceed to London, where he visited Gladstone on August 6, the queen five days later and the Prince of Wales on August 16. He was later restored to his part of his kingdom, with certain restrictions in favor of the British and was proclaimed at Ulundi, January 23, 1883. Then came strife with his chiefs and he was announced as a fugitive from justice seven months after being you, watching every opportunity to minister to your comfort, and every one of those wrinkles would seem to be bright wavelets of sunshine chasing each other over her dear face.

"She will leave you one of these days. These burdens, if not lifted from her shoulders, will break her down. Those rough, hard hands, which have done so many necessary things for you, will be crossed upon her lifeless breast. Those neglected lips, which gave you your first baby kiss, will be forever closed, and those sad, tired eyes will have opened in eternity, and then you will appreciate your mother, but it will be too late."

Some people think most any old soap will do, just so its soap. That's a mistake. It's just as injurious to use some soaps we've seen, as it is to eat impure food, and you would never think of doing that. The safest way is to get your soaps from a safe source. Where purity is the first consideration. Pure soaps. See the box and up.

PUTNAM

NAILS and SUNOL.

New York, Nov. 12, 1890.
PUTNAM NAIL CO.

Dear Sirs,—

In reply to your favor I would state that I have used the Putnam Nail for several years, and have advised my friends to use it only.

It is hardly necessary for me to add that I prefer it to all others.

Yours truly,
Robert Bonner.

The Putnam Nail enjoys the distinction of being the only Hot-Forged and Hammer-Pointed nail made by machinery, and which imitates the old hand process.

ROBERT BONNER

INSISTS ON ITS USE.

All others are COLD ROLLED and SHEARED, as an examination of their edges near the point will show, and are liable to SPLIT or SLIVER in driving, to injure and perhaps kill the horse.

The above picture, from a photo representing Mr. Bonner in the act of handing his smith a Putnam nail, while superintending the shoeing of Sunol, will be sent in the form of a half tone, size, 5x8, on thick, white paper, with wide margin, on receipt of 2 cent stamp for postage, etc.
