STRANGE THINGS BECOMING FAMILIAR

Nowhere else under the sun that we ever heard of, has such an event occurred as that which took place in the District Court room yesterday, when the entire panel of twelve jurors who had been called and drawn to try a case were excused in a batch and filed out of the jury box as though they were a menace to the Court and its officers. The prosecuting attorney asked but one question, as to whether they believed a certain religious ordinance proper or not, and answering in the affirmative, the mandate to go stayed not upon the order of its delivery, but was delivered at once. As one man they arose to their feet, and as one body they made room for those who could pass muster. A review (taken on the spot) of the intellectual developments and physical appearance of the twelve who were not wanted, as well as of their successors, resulted in a mental comparison of the two bodies, which was somewhat to the disadvantage of the one last called. Excluding aecial preferences and leaving matters of doctrine out of the question altogether, the first panel was infinitely superior to the one that tried the case, and we rely upon the best authorities on phrenology, physiognomy and physiology, and the well-known social standing and general deportment of each, for the support of our claim and the justness of our conclusions herein. On one side there was not a countenance bearing traces of dissipation or irregular habits; none that were not open, frank and as well appearing as masculine faces usually are; the men themselves were healthy, in the full possession of all their faculties, could read and write the English language, had never been convicted of a felony, were citizens of the United Status, taxpayers and residents in this judicial district, and did not live or cohabit with more than one woman in the marriage relation, nor, we may add, out of it either. Those who read this at a distance will be apt to say. silently perhaps, that there seems to be nothing wanting there in the make-up of a first-class jury, and then wonder what more was wanting. The wonder would doubtless be increased considerably if such readers were informed that these men were displaced streets, and some of whom at least did not possess all the qualifications previously enumerated, nor any in addition thereto which enabled them to betton thereto which enabled them to betton the possess better judges of the product two produces two hundred and fifty nounds of cotton the product two hundred and come in any sense better judges of their fellows than were their predecessors in the call for a panel. And then, if those readers can stand a little more in the way of temporary astonishment, we will further advise them that the excluded were strictly unbiased and the accepted were not; that the former did not have an idea what their verdict would be until the evidence and the law were placed before them, the latter had; and if more in the wav of bristling information is desired, we will state that it was well understood before a witness was aworn or the Court had imparted a line of law, that the verdict would be guilty, and that the catch-as-catch-can jury was herded in and boxed up for that special purpose and no other! Now take a We wish those who live outside of

Utah who hear of these things had the disposition and ability to come here and see and listen for themselves, The Utah populous places of the kind in proportion to dimensions, in the world; it is not searly large enough now to accommodate the inmates that it has in such a way as human beings, however unfortunate or erring, should be, means? They have mortgaged their and the grist is still being ground out at a ratio increased largely by reason of the cut-and-dried business transacted every day. Is it any wonder that it is crammed, or that the cramming it is crammed, or that the cramming it is rammed, or that the cramming it is a rammed in the cramming in the rammand in the cramming it is a rammed in the cramming in the rammand in the crammand in the cramming in the crammand in process is still going on? ___

NATIONAL PROSPERITY In an article on the above subject, the Philadelphia Times becomes enthusiastic, saying among other things that "The country never in its history had such promise of substantial and lasting prosperity. The products of the field, North and South, are greater than ever before by hundreds of millions; the balance of trade is largely in jour favor; the over-production of his toot firmly upon it and choke it to our mines and mills has been reduced until there is fair demand for the supply; capital is again encouraged to enter the lines of productive energy; labor is slowly but surely gaining better requital; the people are generally more free from debt than ever in the past, and the great mass of consumers will greatly enlarge their demands upon every channel of trade, because of their increased ability to pay." This is a very pleasing picture of the present, and a gratifying spectacle of the future; but if we all could only be as sanguine as the Times writer, it would be a greater satisfaction for the time being. It is a recorded fact in the history of the United States that "good times," socalled, do not hold out but a few seasons at most, and are followed rapidly by more or less stagnation, which extends over a period fully twice the length of time occupied by briskness and buoyancy. That there is to be an "easing up" of a general nature throughout the sountry can easily be as a second wife, and I can speak from believed and understood, as, in the experience. natural order of things, it is about time for the change to come; but that it will be "lasting" when it does come is out of the question, being against precedent and possibility. No one. however, objects to even a temporary return of animated business trans-

OPPOSED TO VACCINATION.

THE French Canadians and other denizens of the Dominion are making a vigorous protest against vaccination, looking upon it as a filthy and unnecessary practice, one that debases manhood and womanhood and accomplishes nothing unattainable by other and less objectionable means. Meetings have been held, all of a more or less riotous character, and to Judge Zane's counsel? There is no second wife that loves her religion demonstrations of various kinds against the practice are of daily occur- expense of another, and the man that rence. The press have discussed the would propose such a measure would subject pro and con vigorously, and be unworthy of one wife. no one can foresee what the result of all the disturbance will be. It is claimed in one quarter that the opposing scitation comes from the ignorant exclusively, in in judgment, and high-living rulers He was brought to the residence of his opposition to which we are informed presume to counsel pure men to follow their example that they may be his injuries were attended to by Dr. that several of the educational institutions have rebelled in a body; and certainly, action from such a source cannot consistently be held as the emanation of a poorly informed rabble. BY TELEGRAPH. vaccination is termed "the mark of the beast" by those most active in opposition to it, thus appealing largely to the superstitions as well as the physical fears of the populace. The antagonism seems to be based largely if not entirely upon Jesuitical influ. ence, and if it reaches all of that class it is safe to say that there will be either trouble or a complete backing down by the hygienic department and its supporters, as the former outnumber the latter considerably.

LIFE OF THE SOUTHERN FARMER.

THE BONDAGE HE IS IN THROUGH CONTRACTING DEBTS.

CALHOUN CO., MISS., September 21st, 1885. Editor Deseret News:

Not having been able to travel but little of late on account of liness, thought a few items of my observations here in Mississippi might be a benefit to the people of Zion, in a direction other than that to which I am specially In your weekly issue of Sept. 9th, 1

notice an article headed "STEER CLEAR OF IT," which experience has caused me to most heartly endorse. During the last twenty-three months I have traveled more or less in twelve countles of Mississippi as well as in n one of Alsosma, and in all of thes find "the strength of the State" - th farmer-in bondage to the merchant. Bondage is a hard word, but I know no better term to fully express the idea. The farmer is aware of his situation, and is continually complaining of it, but he knows "it's too late to lock the stable after the horse is sto-

Many of your readers may wonder in what sense the farmer is in bondage; I would answer, in precisely the same as the "sharks" mentioned in your article are endeavoring to place the unwary farmer of Utah. There is a kind of then given here by which is so very popular that attrie not at the figures, grangers of Utah l can say, without fear of contradiction, so per cent, of the larmers of the State are groaning under it. The proportion would not be so great, perhaps, were it not for the immense mumber of tenants employed. These are continually on the move, seidom remaining in the same place longer than turee or four years, and much oftcaeromy one or two. They labor most's on "haves," the employr furnishing norses, implements, house, rent, etc. The old maxim says: "A rolling stone gathers no moss." Taking this as a rule, this poor people must depend upon the "deed of trust" for provislea, but lustance: Inc tenant goes to the merchant, with an allowance note from his employer, to lay in a supply of meat, coffee, and perhaps a barrel of flour. Before dealing out the required suprimes the merchant questions him as to the force of hands in his family, number of acres he intends planting in cotton, etc. The answer to the latter would be from eight to twenty acres, a man and wife being able to cultivate about eight acres in cotton. to make room for a dozen others, pesides four or the in corn. The promainly picked up haphazard from the visions are then dealt out, and the hundred and fifty pounds of cotto per acre, and one man with his wifeyou know the women are first-class field hands, in this country-will cultivate about eight acres in cotton, besides four or five in corn.

From a man of overforty years' experience in farming, I learn that a man, wife and two or three small children will consume, in one year, 500 lbs. of bacon, equal to 550, 525 worth of coffee perhaps a barrel of flour at $3; and with the very best of economy, the wife doing and the spinning, knitting and weaving her time will permit, their shoes, crothing, etc., will cost $25. All this is exclusive of the "staff of life" (corn, bread.) Now, let us deduct this $108 ex-penses from our man's share of the cotton 1,000 lbs. at 9 cents per pound, equal to $90, minus $7.50 for ginning, and we have our hero $23.50 under the board, which his corn crop

It will be seen from these figures that land owners, unless the most economical of men, must soon become financially prostrated; and that is the very condition the majority are in. arises: What is the general natural cause of this state of affairs? Is it not because men have lived beyond their known, in my limited stay here, a man to seize the last naif-starvel pig of his debtor. If men had refused to mortgage their places or crops, and lived within their means, waich they are obliged to do eventually, they could at least be free men, and at times have a spark of emoyment; but fook at the dull everyday life of the Southern farmer. He tolls from morn ng till night, the year round, to outain a scanty living for his family, and yet he goes to town with one suspender. in view of this condition of affairs, should I not raise my feeble voice in warning to our comfortable, happy people of the mountains? And should we not say, lellow laborers, let not this evir come upon us? Let each man put manageaute. Let not the happy homes of Zion be darkened by such a grini-Visaged monster. With a hope that this will find a place n the columns of the News, and poperused by some to whom it may prove a benefit, I subscribe myself, a prother in the cause of Zion, SENTIMENTS OF AN INDIGNANT WIFE.

SALT LAKE CITY, October 4th, 1885.

I am a constant reader of your aluante paper, and I feel so indiguant at the way the courts are insulting and degrading second wives and their uneren that I can't hold my peace And they do it so nicely (forsonly) in their own estimation as to turn the degrating part of it onto our hus-oands and fathers. I wonder if Judge Zane thinks that he and his col-leagues have all the common sense there is lothis community! I flyed in England over forty years and was a respectable married woman there.
