

NABBY'S HUSBAND.

[CONTINUED.] Nabby's home was over at the "Corners," three miles from the village. She walked rapidly along in the fast-thickening darkness, with the steady, strong gait becoming [yet the self-reliant woman that she was. Yet even her unimaginative nature was not proof against the dreary influence of the chilly, raw November evening. The wind whistled through the bare tree branches, which creaked and groaned mournfully, and waved wildly up and down in the dim light overhead. The wind seemed to cherish a special spite against Nabby. It blew her bonnet off and her hair flying about her head, and madly with her for her shawl took her breath away, and firmly resisted her every step. Finally, it began to send spiteful dashes of cold rain down her face—rain that seemed almost to freeze as it fell. "Josiah used to come after me with an umbrella when I was caught out in the rain," thought Nabby, "but he was always real kind and good to me, after all. I dunno's he ever give me a cross word in his life, even when he'd ben drinkin'."
