[From the London Times.]

Great Earthquake in Moluccas.

The Indian mail brings advices of another of those dreadful earthquakes for which Ternati and the adjoining localities in the Moluccas are proverbial.

An eruption of the active volcano on the island of Great Sangir, in longitude 125 degrees 50 minutes east and latitude 3 degrees 50 minutes north, has occurred. The northwestern part of the island of Great Sangir formed by the mountain Awn, which has several peaks, the highest being about four thousand feet above the sea. On the west side the mountain runs very steep into the sea, at the height of the large village Kandhar, however, falling away to a low promontory.

Between seven and eight o'clock on the evening of the 2d of March, a sudden and altogether indescribable crashing noise was heard, which, indicating to the Sangirese an eruption of the volcano, filled them with consternation. Simultaneously with this, the glowing lava streamed downward with irresistible force in different directions, bearing with it whatever it encountered on its destructive course, and causing the sea to boil whenever they came in contact.

The hot springs opened up and cast out a flood of boiling water, which destroyed and carried away what the fire had spared. The sea, obedient to an unusual impulse, lashed the rocks with frightful violence, dashed upon the shore and heaved itself with a wild haste against the land as if it strove to overmaster the fire stream.

This frightful picture of destruction, the horror of which was increased by the shrieks of men and beasts, the wild roaring of the tempest, and the crashing of thousands of trees torn up and carried away, was followed, about an hour later, by peals of thunder which shook the ground and deafened the ear.

A black column of stone and ashes then shot up from the mountain to an immense height, and fell, illumined by the glare of the lava, like a shower of fire upon the surrounding country below, producing a darkness that only now and then momentarily broken by the flashes of lightning, was so intense, that people could not discern objects close at hand, and which completed their confusion and despair.

Large stones were hurled through the air, crushing whatever they fell upon. Houses and crops, which had not been destroyed by fire, sunk and disappeared beneath the ashes and stones, and the hill streams, stopped by these barriers, formed lakes, which, breaking over their banks, soon proved a new source of destruction. This lasted some hours.

About midnight the raging elements sank to rest; but on the following day, about noon, they again resumed their work of destruction with renewed violence. In the mean time the fall of ashes continued without intermission, and was so thick on this day that the rays of the sun could not penetrate through it, and an appalling darkness prevailed.

Scarcely recovered in some degree from their fright, the inhabitants of this desolated part of Sangir were again disturbed by an eruption on the 16th March, which destroyed many fields and a great number of trees on the Tabukan side.

Since then the volcano has remained quiet, and the only symptom of its working has been the smoke rising up in all directions from cracks and fissures in the ground. The streams of lava on the slopes are still so slightly cooled that people dare not venture to any great distance from the shore. According to the accounts of the natives, the top of the mountain does not appear to have undergone any noticeable alteration.

On the other side of Kandhar, on the extreme north point of the island, the appearance of the devastation which has been caused, is, if possible, even more frightful than what has taken place in Taruna. For here, where formerly there were to be seen extensive fields bearing all kinds of crops, and thickly planted and endless groves of cocoa-nuts, we now find nothing but lava, stones and ashes.

The liquid fire seems at this point to have flowed from the mountain with irresistible force and in prodigious quantity. Not only has this fearful flood, as it were, buried the whole district and all that was upon it, but after having caused this destruction over an extent of several miles, it was still powerful enough, on reaching the shore, to form two long tanjongs (capes) at places where the depth of water formerly consisted of many fathoms.

A number of other districts and places have been, some wholly destroyed, others greatly injured by the fire.

The loss of life has been great. It is estimated as follows in the undermentioned districts: Taruna, men, women and children, 722; Kandhar, men, women and children, 45; Tabukan, men, women and children, 2,039. Total, 2,766.

The greater number met their death in the gardens. They fled in all directions, but were overtaken and swallowed up by the fatal fire-stream. Some tried to save themselves in the trees, but were either carried away with them or killed by the scorching heat.

At Kalangan and Tarfang the houses were filled with people, who were stopped in their flight by the lava streaming down on all sides and the streams of boiling water, and who met their death under the burning ashes and the tumbling houses. Many who had reached the shore and thought themselves safe, became a prey to the furious waves, and many died through sheer despair and agony.

BE SYSTEMATIC.—Order is the necessary element in the success of every man, but in no class is its strict observance more requisite than with the husbandman. Show us a farmer who is orderly in the location, management, construction, preservation of his buildings; in the erection and maintenance of his fences; in the division of his farm into lots; in the selection, planting and care of his fruit trees; in the preparation and cultivation of his soil, and the putting in of his seed; in the rotation of his crops; in the management of his stock; in the purchase and care of his farming implements; in the curing and marketing of his products; in the preparation of his fuel; in short, one who is governed by these rules—'A time for everything, and everything in its time,' 'A place for everything, and everything in its place,' and we will show you an intelligent, successful,
