It is generally conthe opinion that to send in the same names again would be a polltical blunder, almost equivalent to a crime, and that the President would be beaten on them worse ceded that Wade Hampton will be elected his successor, and so remsin during the rest of his life, so great than before. Two or three prominent democratic Senators advise the president, on the other hand, that a sufficient number of democratic is his popularity. votes, which were withheld on the The Opponents of the Bland Silve former occasion, will now be avail-able to secure their confirmation. This belief is founded upon the practical unanimity with which the democratic journals through-The Journal's Washington spe-cial says: Since Congress entered upon its holiday recess the opponents of the Bland silver bill have the democratic journals through-out the country have denounced those members of their party who did not uphold the President, and, as these journals argue, strengthen-ed Conking's ascendency in New York State, and at the same time failed to improve the good occasion for aggravating the discord in the ranks of their political connects been working energetically to beat it and prevent its becoming a law. Considerable pressure has been brought to bear upon several republican senators who have entertained some doubts as to the wisdom of passing a bill providing for an un-limited legal tender power, and it ranks of their political opponents. Many republican well wishers of the President not only refuse to believe that he will send in those names, but say it is not creditable is now claimed with a degree of positiveness that more than one-third of the Senate will vote against any measure containing this provi-sion, and that the President will be that he will make any further ef-fort to displace Arthur and Cor-nell during the present session. They take this view for the reason that the Senate's recent action was two-thirds do not favor a bill mak-ing silver an unlimited legal tenmanifestly a declaration on its part manifestly a declaration on its part that no no change whatever in those offices is necessary. The individual merits or demerits of Roosevelt and Prince were not made subjects of discus-sion, and although Prince's nomin-ation was undoubtedly objection-able on some special grounds, its rejection was placed upon the same ground as Roosevelt's, namely, that its confirmation would involve the removal of an officer whom the the removal of an officer whom the tain. The remaining four votes are looked for from the following six, majority of the Senate desired to retain. The republican opponents of the President says it is not at all im-probable that he may secure the confirmation of the new nomina-tions by the aid of additional dem-ocratic support, but they also de-clare that such a victory on his part would permanently alienate from him all but four or five repub-lican senators, and that he would lican senators, and that he would henceforth be treated by the maority of the republicans as belonging to the democrats.
