VAN REENAN'S PASS, CONNECTING LINK BETWEEN ARMIES OF ROBERTS AND BULLER.

With the country about Smaldeel and Winberg in his possession, Lord Roberts is in a position to threaten not only Kroonstadt, but Bethlehem, which is the western terminus of the railroad that crosses part of the Orange Free State, cuts through the Drakenberg mountains at Van Reenan's pass and runs on through Natil to Ladysmith, above which General Buller's army is stationed. Boers guarding Van Reenan's and other passes in the Drakenberg mountains have for a long time prevented Buller from entering the Orange Free State, but Lord Roberts doubtless contemplates a speedy juncture with Buller. Once the railroad from Rethlehem to Ladysmith and from Ladysmith to Durban is in his on, he will have a new line of communications covering only about 225 miles. His present line from Smaldeel to Cape Town is fully 700 miles and from Smaldeel to Port Elizabeth or East London is about 500 miles.
