SCHOOL BOARD'S APPEAL TO VOTERS

Urgent Need of More Adequate School Accommodations Clearly Set Forth.

IN HONOR OF PREST. FLYGARE.

Committee on Resolutions of Respect From Stake Academy—Deserted Husband Opposes Divorce.

Ogden, Feb. 21.—The board of education has issued an address to the taxpayers of Ogden city, who will vote on the school bond issue on Monday next, making clear the necessity for bonding the city for $90,000, that those who will have to pay for the same may be thoroughly acquainted with the situation. Every property taxpayer will be entitled to vote.

The present high school, the board states, is entirely inadequate. The building was not originally planned for, nor adapted to, high school work. The present efficiency of the work is greatly impaired on account of the lack of room for the increased number of students. By next September there will be another increase of about 200 students. When this large number desire to enter the high school there will be positively no room for them.

If we desire to keep our boys and girls at home and properly fit them for the increased activities and sterner competitions of life, we must meet this demand as soon as possible by the establishment of manual training and domestic science departments in the high school. This is an impossibility under present conditions.

The proposed issue of $90,000 bonds to run 20 years at 4 per cent will necessitate an annual increase of $3,000 to the general tax of Ogden city. This increase on the present city valuation of $1,225,000 (1907) amounts to 22-1/2 cents on a dollar. At the rate of 22-1/2 of one mill on a dollar, on an individual whose assessed valuation is $1,000, the total and actual increase of tax would be 32 cents.

There is no other way to raise the necessary amount for a new high school. If these bonds are not voted we shall be able to build, with available means, but a small addition to the one school. This would not relieve the other crowded schools nor would it in the least relieve the high school, whereas, if a modern high school is built, the present high school building will make an admirable grade school, situated in the right place so as to relieve those much crowded schools, viz.: the Madison, Dee, Grant, Central and Lewis. This plan will give us a new high school, costing upwards of $100,000 complete; and at the same time transfer to the grade school department an excellent and much needed building, worth, conservatively speaking, $50,000, thus settling both questions for some time to come.

The appeal concludes as follows: We leave the matter to you, the taxpayers of Ogden, as to whether we shall provide suitable and sanitary accommodations for all the children or be compelled to resort to the using of unsuitable rooms, or lessening the hours of tuition in the future.

A STREET CLEANER.

The first heavy snowfall of the winter in New York city, belated as it was, gave one wealthy man's son an opportunity to show that he was not like so many other sons of richest stock—a weeping for Daniel D. Streeter, son of Millionaire Brewer M. B. Streeter, of Brooklyn, went to work as a snow shoveler for the city at $1.25 a day. Not that he needed the money to pay for some boyish escapade, nor that he was winning a bet nor that his father had pulled the purse strings on him for any reason at all. Young Streeter was simply carrying out a well-formed idea that he ought to earn his own living. Streeter is a student at Columbia university, and a few days before he became a snow shoveler he gave dinner to his intimates and told them he was going to earn his living, as he did not believe a man should live on the money earned by others. His friends laughed. At the university all express admiration for the lad who is yet an infant in the eyes of the law, and predict that he will make a name for himself in the world. His father simply said: "Boys will be boys. I am proud of him. But too much learning is a bad thing."
