

THE EVENING NEWS.

GEORGE Q. CANNON.
EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Thursday, October 27, 1870.

THERE will be two days' meetings held in one of the Tabernacles, Salt Lake City, by the First Presidency and Twelve Apostles, on Saturday the 28th and Sunday the 29th of October. Meetings to commence at 10 o'clock on the morning of Saturday.

BRIGHAM YOUNG.

MEETINGS AT PROVO-WOOLEN FACTORY.

THE late visit of Presidents Young and Smith, several of the Apostles and other Elders to Provo, for the purpose of holding two days' meetings and attending to other business, was most interesting and satisfactory to the visitors, and doubtless profitable to the people. Of the benefit which results from such gatherings to the speakers and the hearers there is no question, the experience of the many years during which this system of visiting has been pursued, has established beyond all doubt that its fruits are excellent.

It was stated by President Young at the recent Conference that there is no better field for missionary labor in the world than Utah Territory affords to the Elders. It only requires one to travel through the Territory to see the force and truth of this remark. The people are increasing in numbers, new settlements are being established and old ones enlarged, and on every hand there is a demand for instruction. If the First Presidency and Twelve Apostles were to devote every Saturday and Sunday in the year to meeting with the people of the various cities and settlements throughout the Territory, they would scarcely supply the demand there is for their ministrations. In view of this fact the action of President Young and his counselors at the recent conference in resigning the offices which they held, the duties of which required their presence and time in this city, is easily understood. By these resignations they are left more free to travel and minister unto the people, and fill the calls which are multiplying every day. It is not probable that this city will hereafter be favored to the extent it has been in the past with the society and teachings of the leaders of the Church—there are other fields which demand their attention and counsel, and it is likely they will receive them.

While at Provo we visited the buildings which are being erected for the Woollen Factory. This factory is being established upon the co-operative principle. We were aware that extensive premises were being built for this business, and had seen the foundation which had been prepared for the main building; but we were astonished at the large structures which we saw. A gentleman who had visited Provo lately, and who is the agent for one of the largest machinery manufacturing companies in the West, had said that there were no factory buildings west of the Alleghany Mountains equal to those of Provo. We knew that the was familiar with buildings of this description in all parts of the country, and thought, after hearing his remark, that those at Provo must be very good; but still we were unprepared to see such a substantial structure as we saw in the main building of the factory. There are many larger, probably; but for solidity and strength there is no better in any country. The main buildings of stone, and is 145 feet long, 65 wide and four stories high, exclusive of the basement. The stories are each twelve feet between joists. At the side of and connected with the building, is a tower, about twenty feet square, in which the staircases will be built. The building will be crowned with a Mansard roof. It is the intention to fill the first and part of the second floors with looms; spinning apparatus—mules, &c., will occupy the remaining portion of the second floor and the entire third; the fourth will be filled with carding machines.

Close by the store, are two adobe buildings, which will be connected with it, when finished, with covered railways; the largest of which is 134 feet long, 34 feet wide, and has two stories, exclusive of basement. This will be devoted to bolting, cleansing and drying purposes. The other building is 74 feet long, 34 feet wide, also two stories beside the basement. This will be used for finishing purposes. It is the intention to keep 3,000 spindles at work and eight sets of carding machines; there will probably be about 200 hands employed in the factory. Complete arrangements will be made for washing the wool, and it will be dried by machinery. Every exertion will be made to have the buildings covered early in the winter.

The proprietors seem determined to spare no pains to make the factory thoroughly complete in all its details, and we expect that, when fairly in operation, it will be one of the finest establishments in the country. This enterprise was originated and put in motion by President Young, whose counsel and suggestions have been invaluable in giving the organization a practicable shape and in furnishing plans for the buildings. Their erection has been ably superintended by Bishop A. D. Smoot, assisted by the leading men and citizens of Provo.

Such a factory as this must give a great impulse to the production of wool, and we think the day is not far distant when Utah's wool, and the cloths manufactured from it, will be unsurpassed by any in the world. These buildings give one a pretty good idea of the progress which we, as a people, are making in the development of manufacturing interests. They are a standing refutation of the foolish ideas of those who have asserted that Utah was not well adapted for manufactures; and a tangible evidence of the excellent results which accompany co-operation. President Young encouraged the people by saying that it would not be long until factories much larger than this now being built would be needed and be erected; and his hearers believed what he said, for it is no more unlikely to be fulfilled now than it was a short time ago that such a factory as this of which we speak would be built in Provo.

PROFESSOR Huxley, the eminent British scientist, declared in a recent lecture at Liverpool, that in a walk through the streets of that place he could behold as many and as degraded savages as could be witnessed in the most remote of the British colonies. He had been shocked, he said, to see unwashed, unkempt, brutal people side by side with indications of the greatest refinement and luxury.

The actual existence of such a state of things needed not the confirmatory statement of Professor Huxley to prove its truth. No observant person can walk through the streets of any of the large cities of Christendom without being impressed, similarly to Professor Huxley. On every hand he may observe evidences of the highest luxury and splendor; but the evidences of squalor, misery, ruffianism and savagery are ten times more numerous. In fact the former are acquired and maintained at the expense of the latter; the few have the power which wealth gives, and they use it to grind down and oppress the laboring poor; and the result is that the latter, whose numbers are continually increasing, are sinking deeper and deeper, the world over, into more hopeless poverty, which as a natural consequence, heightens and increases crime and brutality.

Charitable institutions and other benevolent and well-meaning efforts, for the relief of present misery and suffering, will never remove the evils referred to by Professor Huxley. The inside of the platter, the circulation of life force of human society must be purified, and society itself based on a principle which shall, in spirit as well as word, secure to all God's creatures the right to life and the pursuit of happiness, and competence to honest industry, before these evils can be remedied. This is the gospel of salvation that public teachers should promulgate and toil to make practical. Such a system would gain myriads of converts, and in this great work the armies of missionaries and the hundreds of thousands of treasure now controlled by religious societies might be successfully expended in saving the souls and bodies of the half starved, semi-brutalized millions of Christendom, which would be infinitely more sensible than the useless efforts now made under their directions to secure salvation hereafter to the inhabitants of "heathendom."

A CO-OPERATIVE system has been started in Kansas, for the special purpose of farming and manufacturing silk. The following is an extract from a letter respecting the new enterprise, written from Valeton, Kansas, and published in the St. Louis Tribune:

"We are in the early stages of preparation only as yet. We have no organization of industry, and but little diversity of pursuit, the principal labors being ordinary farming and collecting materials for building. We have one loom weaving silk velvet trimmings. The whole work of preparing the silk and weaving it is done by one man, his wife and daughter. We expect to put additional looms in the new factory next spring, and as soon as our mulberry plantation shall be sufficient to provide employment for women and children in producing silk, and treading from the cocoon to the finished fabric. Two years hence we hope to have a large mansion occupied, a varied industry or society, education established and acceptable society. At present all our work, except the silk business is done by hired laborers."

The above extract is, or should be, suggestive to many of the people of Utah. The soil of the Territory is just the thing for growing the mulberry; and in tending and feeding the worms, and preparing the silk for the weaver, the tens of thousands of children and the thousands of women, for which Utah is so celebrated, might be profitably employed. No portion of the continent, probably, is better provided with the necessary skill to weave the raw material into silken fabrics; and if taken hold of properly, and as generally as it might be, silk growing and culture would be of immense pecuniary benefit to the Territory, infinitely more so than mining for precious metals; and we think, no business, promising half the sure returns this does could be commenced and carried on with less capital or trouble.
