UTAH OF FISH SPRINGS.

This Property Now Equipped with a Fine Hoisting Plant.

DIVIDENDS MAY BE RESUMED SHORTLY.

Brisk Business On the Exchange Today—Strike In Cache Valley—Miscellaneous Mining News.

Stockholders in the Utah mine at Fish Springs have been hoping for a resumption of dividends for some time past, and it now seems that their hopes are about to be realized, as reports from the mine are of a nature calculated to throw to the front this feature of the company's business.

Messrs. E. M. Weller, Charles Van Alstyne and Charles Crismon, came in from Fish Springs last night, after having been absent several weeks assisting in the installation of the company's new hoisting works. Presiding there to this end was Mr. H. P. Probert, representative of Fairbanks, Morse & Co., of Denver, this gentleman having superintended the construction of the plant for the firm mentioned. According to Mr. Probert it is one of the nicest plants in the country, complete in every detail, and ready to start up immediately with a 1,500-pound lift or a capacity of one ton per minute.

"I am not interested in the Utah in any way," said Mr. Probert when seen by the NEWS, "and I want to say that those people are now ready to do good work, and have every facility for the shipment of heavy shipments at regular intervals. The Utah mine is an excellent proposition, and those handling it are capable, competent and will make it a good paper. The miners are now moving into the dump and a higher grade than some that it is being steadily shipped by other companies. The property has a good shaft house and engine, generally are in tip-top shape."

Mr. Probert here turned his attention to what the camp needs, and stated that it would never be what it ought to be, until a smelter had been erected. This, said he, would enable mine-owners to treat the product of their properties and give them a profit that is now turned against and going to waste. A railroad could not be expected, thought he, for there was not enough ore in sight to warrant such an enterprise, which is entirely beyond individual capacity to build one.

The new plant will be propelled by a 40-horse power gasoline engine, which is now set up and runs to a nicety. The air compressor has a capacity of 1,000 feet per minute and is connected with the shaft by 1,200 feet long sinking, said Mr. Weller, will commence in the shaft in a few days. Meanwhile there is a force of ten in transit, and on the whole the outlook for the Utah is now better than ever before.

One Fifty Thousand Shares Changed Hands in the Mill B Today.

Today's mail produced sales aggregating 50,200 shares, while those leaving the cook headed out the seat little less at 31,345.46. Baltimore used up considerable time at the start, and as great was the demand for certain securities that the board could not keep track of the sales of them, in fact, the time for his own individual share.

Prior to the new activity was Alta, which contributed 10 shares at 40 cents. Then there was business in Eagle at 7½ cents, Davis and Lark at 6½, and Four Aces at figures ranging all the way from 40 to 41½ cents. In the Stock Exchange was quite animated, and during its discussion sales were made embracing something like 5,000 shares, with the larger proportion of them in the Geyser-Marion, free from the litigation of boundarying, were a bapin exposition at 10 cents a share. Galena was also a favorite with several of the dealings to the extent of 1,300 shares, this stock being likewise favored with good buyers. Mercur dropped an odd half-cent at 47.85, while Northern Light found others at 41 cents and a trifle over.

Buttonham carried a little and 3 bunch of the top-end stock, and the dealers continued from a fairly active business between 26 and 27, the most active seller of the day, however, was Little Pittsburg, which maintained its excellent standing of the forenoon and sold all the way from 15 to 17 cents a share. Other sellers were Bullion Beck, May Day, Omaha, Nancie Pool, and Star Consolidated, the latter being freely taken at from 47.40 to 11.45. STRIKE IN CACHE VALLEY.

The Elkhorn Near Providence Has a Six-Foot Body of Ore.

Another mining strike has been made in the hills east of Providence, which is of considerable importance. For some time past Mr. John K. Loosley, whose home is in Charleston, has been working on the Elkhorn, a property situated on the face of the mountains about one-and-a-half miles east of Providence, and in which Mr. Loosley and brothers own two-thirds of the claim. The property formerly possessed, Mr. Loosley, however, now owns the entire claim, and has driven a tunnel into the hill a distance of 80 feet, and is now in the ore vein which is six feet wide and carries about $60 a ton of silver and gold. Mr. Loosley was in the city yesterday, and stated to a Journal representative that he is preparing to ship ore immediately.

An ore chute 450 feet long, from the mouth of the tunnel to the base of the hill is being constructed, and as soon as it is completed shipments will begin. At present there are employed in the mine, and arrangements are being made to put on a night shift.—Logan Journal.

DIPS AND SPURS.

Silver, 59½; lead, $4.85.

The discovery of rich silver has been made in the Wahsatch hills on Lion Hill.

Elmer E. Crooke, the erstwhile auctioneer, has embarked in the polisher business.

Capt. J. H. De Le Mar left for the east yesterday, leaving Victor M. Clement in charge of his western interests.

The Star Consolidated was in yesterday with a pound ore, said to run as high as $47 gold, $1 in silver and a small percentage of copper.

The Salt Lake and Mercur railway will have a new Shay locomotive at its service in a week or so. Then, say those at the company's office, they will be better able to handle the immense amount of freight now going into the Mercur district.

Park Record: Assessment work has been very active in all parts of the district for the past several weeks and from present indications the opportunities in "jumpy" claims on Jan. 1st will be very small. The general activity of the past few months has spurred prospectors up to the necessity of protecting their claims.

Jay P. Graves of Spokane, Wash., has organized a mining company in Montana to build a large smelter for the treatment of ores from the properties of the Old Ironsides and Knob Hill companies in the Boundary Creek district. The capital has all been subscribed, and plans are being formulated for the proposed smelter. It is said that the smelting will be done entirely out of any ores where, and that work on the erection of the plant will begin early in the spring.

COOKING AT "OLD 42."

The last number of the Milleneial Star is hard reading as does that carries the ex-missionary's feeling thoughts back to those halcyon days now some past recall.

Under the caption of "A Valuable Gift," the Star says:

"The visits of sometimes made Gathering parishes have no small bit we have just received substantial evidence that the claim is not true. The well known Scot. Wallace and Macmillan company, of Liverpool, England, have just presented the Liverpool office with a handsome steward sized cooker, an article that for the benefit of missionaries would shadow the heart of any housewife in Europe or America.

"It does and need much of an effort to picture the smile of happy contentment that now sweeps over the kindly, motherly face of Sister Hutchinson as she busily proceeds to fix up a tasty meal in her well known economy style; or perchance the appreciative ease of Joe McFarlane from Oz considerably old office about as the cooker steps into nurse gives his cranky stomach, Life at "Gathering" is now more to dread of continental and other hotel operations. No more will the homesick shriek of "Oz" come welling up from cooking distress, no more will be necessary, Brother Brown, drive to at stampede pell mell down those rickety steps and with each step a shower of packets of water from the spacious kitchen, nor waste of nerves and time and the wear and tear of nervous prostration and nostrils. No longer will the hungry missionaries fall down in the presence of the cook, and no more will he be relegated to the rickety, sawbucks from the Utopian dream. Brother Hutchinson, with "oh, dear the stove," All these things are now regulated into the data and history past.

Forty-two Islington, Liverpool, always had a good stock now they have got a treasure.

The goose hangs high at good old "forty-two."

It is time there was a reformation in the extent of an average missionary's cooking ability. Between eaters and kind as there of perspective missionaries to Europe, you would be surprised to learn how and lack—ability to search of his countenance of you quickly initiated him into the first degree of the order culinary art, when you pack his trunk do not forget to drop a deep spoon an apron and a few cook books.

Heading the first question that the average prospective missionary is asked is, "Are you a good cook?"

Invariably the second is regarding the queerest leaves that he comes from the country. "Have you any children?"

Thereby hangs a tale. Shoemakers in the European mission find more applications than any other trade, and the reason they are wanted after the boy who can't cook is as scarce as hen's teeth, or he, who bears upon the Apocalypse and the Pentateuch, is spiritually and mentally.

* * *

The average male who does not profess to wear above Cook's navy would be surprised to see how budding missionaries has learned out on a wet day, the amount of "double dare" exchanged by the young initiated in the mysteries of Pure Potatoes on a basis of ten knives at each bedroom-mantle piece at the first sound of the dinner bell, the consternation of which period the young members are concerned a collection of potatoes, and the number of knives and exactly 238 feet of clean, third to behold, is to be more explicit, if we are to believe all we are told. Certain it is that the latch-keys to their weary days' weary duties of continual cook's work by the missionaries' wives, and the cook's work by the missionaries' wives, and they have and outside of eastern cities and the feet of each chat in Boston is 16,625 gallons of water daily.

* * *

But man cannot live on mush alone, and the missionary soon begins to sputter at the fare. The novice begins to branch out. He proceeds to put on airs and to display fancy dishes. He soars to the extent of rice pudding. It is at such a simple process to watch your pudding that it is a wonder that a greater number don't burn it. Rice, as a pudding, is delicious, any how you do it, with an abundance of fruit and a liberal sauce to please Prof. Albert, kicks the disreputable missionary out cut, with worldly ideas of cooking and wrong-doers, and all other unmentionables. Burning with indignation at such treatment the black to the face and scorning the praise of the elders, he every one, some knowing one subscribers who the star operator makes nearly, sneaks for, more and more remorse as he frantically bails the rapidly swelling and burning contents into a very available second and ultimately dishes out a fetid blackened, evil smelling compounding most for the abolishers of the appreciative colaborers.

But it is unmistakable during the process of reducing a juicy chuck steak to the proverbial shoe that the average defender of crude and fashionable stews.

We had called at the luscious dollies for days—beautiful steak with their yellow, crisp trimmings floating in rich dark brown gravy just the mother used to fry, and it was a delicious dream. Mc case lots, and the fat fell upon one named—shall we say Brown. Brown was overjoyed at his luck in being honored. It would reward that upper chamber to Parian stars, giving orders like a field marshal. Like the famous centurion of old, he said, "Go," and we "Come," and "Come," and we "Go," and a procession of two was appointed to pool the occasion, while the latest importation from Zion secured the front pew. Here we all ever tried to forget." It is the most fascinating pastime to experience. You take a knife in one hand and a fork in the other, and put on a napkin and be athletic until the supply accumulation from the size of a marble, whereupon you sit down and "go" with Brown's capitalistic appetite suggestion you start in to survive. The wrestling process is under that "go" which has no idea how much he can strain off a potato peel in three h. Neither does his parents mind tempting him to the extent of extraction and attachment to the aforesaid peel process for he operates children peeling potatoes, parsnips, and, in fact, everything in sight.

In the immediate future is indicated in a suspicious circumference the back British grass. The steak is on the pantry and commences to disappear. Then afterward out, the fork takes refuge on the top of the knife shaft. With lightning rapidity Brown is thrown to nine no longer his general activity. It means that no fooling is permissible, external wound and get with a fork burns his digits and gets mad generally. Then the Boss has to crawl through the pantry the grease and ashes nearly set the chimney on fire, until in desperation he takes the frying pan and dumps it into a handy bucket of water, and a fearful fizz of smoke, and, with a terrible conflagration in the kitchen, ensues. Finally the steak is driven out of the watery chaos, and the cooking process is resumed, which ends the day with a meal that would make the ox have heard and "lay in the" to digest the combination.

You, cooking rapids and shoulds are indispensable on the Devonian missionary, and it would be Liverpool there is a burning necessity of economic habits and study to combine the basis of the saved $1.50.

Fig Pacific Who Fought Jim Williams Accused of Shaving the "Yellow Streak."

Monroe Post, the big journal whom Jim Williams once thrashed, and who in turn was defeated by him in a later battle, received a meeting yesterday in Saturday evening's Denver Post from Orient, Utah, the sporting editor of the paper. Among other things Post says:

Monroe Post (writes) a quite a romantic name, but Peter Post would fit him more appropriately. It appears in the records of mesmerism that under such a name lived one of the most famous of the Dutch Angels, and that he was compelled once the nose to run as Jeffery put up his hands. At least that is the impression Mr. Post leaves on the person. Monroe Post is a large man, a fact that doubtless contributed materially to the accident.

AMUSEMENTS.

Notwithstanding the many descriptive pages that has decorated the billboards for a week or so announcing the coming of Allen Benedict, in Fabio Romano, for a week's engagement at the Grand, the audience last night at the opening performance, only half filled the house. That Mr. Benedict and his company were out of place even as the city's popular resort house was greatly evident before the play had proceeded very far. The audience on the part of those present was to take lightly the serious scenes, for the most amusing lines in the pieces were delivered in the dry and uninteresting manner of the novice, characterized by the absence of all dramatic action. The exceptions were in the cases of Officer Pierce as Patrick and Myrtle Reed as Bridget, the latter Bradford has a character role, a gawky, big eater and a good-natured Irish girl who is always talking. Miss Reed, as she is in private life, is a young woman of other years, with a good figure and a pleasing face, and in her enthusiasm. Many of the sensations are foreshadowed and for that reason are robbed of the dramatic effect. The suspicion and battle during of Oliver Hinton, between men, was a tame performance. Fabio Romano will be a week's run with Saturday matinee.

PAY DAY AT THE FORT.

Sixteen Thousand Dollars Conveyed to Fort Douglas on a Street Car.

A heated South street car, belonging to the Salt Lake City Street Railroad company, bound for Fort Douglas, attracted considerable attention and much speculation among passing pedestrians this morning. On board the car were about half a dozen men and the Twenty-fourth infantry and a couple of officers all armed with heavy guns. It was thought by some that the men were after desperados, a "Moore" report had reached the car and learned from the driver that the men had had been in the Big Cottonwood Western district where they resorted to express policy—something stronger than the Fort. It is safely and the money was later distributed among the boys.
