Board of Trade.—The monthly meeting of the Salt Lake Board of Trade will be held in the Council House Friday, Feb. 23, at 7 p.m.

JOHN C. CUTLER.

Priesthood Meeting.—The regular monthly meeting of the Priesthood of the Stake will be held in the Assembly Hall, at 11 a.m. on Saturday, February 3, 1883.

WM. W. TAYLOR, Clerk.

The Fatal Accident.—The funeral services over the remains of Brigadier General Wm. Murphy, who was accidentally killed by the discharge of a gun, already related in the News, will take place at the Second Ward School house, on to-morrow, Wednesday, at 1 o'clock p.m. Friends are respectfully invited.

Funeral Services.—In the notice of the death of Mrs. Sarah Haigh, which appeared in Monday evening's News, the name was misspelled Haigh. The funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Haigh will be conducted at the Fourth Ward School-house to-morrow, Wednesday, at 11 a.m.

Theatre.—"Forbidden Fruit," played by the Home Dramatic Club last evening, was again a signal success. The new scenery, the title of the piece and the excellent reputation of the company for putting fine pieces on the stage in creditable shape all combined to draw a large house in spite of the miserable weather. In addition to the customary attractions above alluded to, the auditors were treated to some excellent music by Carless & Coxall's newly organized orchestra, which, considering the fact that the members are mainly young men, and comparatively inexperienced, performed wonderfully well; so well that one or two original pieces captivated the house, and they were vociferously encored. In a short time the new orchestra will astonish the natives. Those who were present declare that altogether it was a fine entertainment, worthy of another repetition.

Brutal Assault.—A fracas occurred at the Germania smelter yesterday, which resulted in sending one man to the hospital and another to jail. Henry Gerson is in duress and William Jewett is in duress for repairs. The following account is given by the injured man and is said to be a correct version of the unfortunate affair:

GERMANIA, Jan. 20, 1883.

Early this morning Henri Gerson and I, the undersigned, William Jewett, had a quarrel about work necessary to be done in the Germania White Lead Works. Henri Gerson refusing to do the work ordered, bringing on the quarrel. The said Gerson then called me the vilest names in the English language—of a-b, darning and cursing me as a "damned" man. In the excitement of the moment I struck him with a broom then in my hand. The said Gerson picking up an iron bar struck me at least once over the head, telling me to the ground. The blood streamed from my head. I had barely strength enough to rise, put my hands to my head and run to Dr. Rader's house, where I fell to the floor.

This is as it happened to the best of my knowledge and belief.

CAPTURE OF THE TRAIN ROBBERS.

TWO ARE CAPTURED AFTER A DISPERATE FIGHT AND THE OTHERS SURRENDER WITHOUT A STRUGGLE.

By the train which arrived at 10 a.m. to-day from the south, members of two parties of robbers who had been in pursuit of the robbers who committed the robbery on the C. P. R. R., arrived, bringing with them the five bandits, whom they had captured. The news of the capture spread rapidly, and the arrival of the party created a great deal of excitement, a large crowd gathering near the city jail to catch a glimpse of the desperadoes, two of whom are badly wounded.

We give the details as narrated this morning by the officers who effected the arrest.

Mr. Samuel Deal, detective of the Central Pacific Railroad, last Monday, a week ago, January 22nd, about 7:30 o'clock a.m., while at Elko, waiting for the western train, learned that train No. 1 was attacked by several masked robbers at Montello. He went to the telegraph office to get what information he could. He telegraphed to Mr. Cottingham, superintendent at Kelton. He also left instructions to telegraph to Mr. Fell at Ogden, in order to obtain all information possible regarding the robbery. He found, after waiting some time, that the train had been stopped and an attempt made to rob the express car. He went then to the office of Sheriff Taylor, of Elko, Nevada. He waked up Mr. Polk, deputy sheriff, requested him to accompany him to the scene of the robbery, and follow the parties who perpetrated it; waited until No. 2 train arrived at Elko. Mr. Taylor, the sheriff of Elko, was on board the train that was robbed, having come on from Wells with it. The latter agreed that Mr. Polk should go along, that an organization should be effected and the robbers followed up. They then proceeded to organize for that purpose. They received a telegram from Mr. Fell, ordering a special train to proceed to the scene of the robbery. The party went to Wells on the special. They there procured several men to assist them. From there they went to Montello, and interviewed the section men—five in number, including Mr. Patterson. It was found that the party of robbers numbered five, not seven, as at first reported. The robbers reached Montello at 8:30 o'clock in the evening and hid their horses. They then proceeded to the section house and got the section hands—Chinamen—and locked them up. They then got the white section houses and locked them up in the house. The robbers placed the section houses under a guard and cooked their supper in the house where the white men lived. One of the men in the house offered to cook their supper, but they refused this service and cooked it themselves. They all had caps drawn over their faces. After supper they made the men put up provisions for them. They remained till the train arrived at 1:10 o'clock on Sunday morning. On its coming, they compelled the Chinamen to flag it, stopping it and the public are familiar with what followed in the act of attempted robbery.

The officers proceeded by special car to Teocoma where they found horses, which had been ordered by Mr. Fell for the party. They then arranged for the pursuit. The party numbered eight, including Mr. Deal, Deputy Polk, Sheriff Brown and five others. On Tuesday morning following they started from Teocoma in pursuit. They discovered the trail of the robbers, who were in two parties, the tracks being in the show and on the ground. They robbed several men on the way, taking a watch, sack of flour, rifle and other articles from a man named Lee. They also stole a band of horses, about 25 in number, from a ranch near where the officers struck their tracks.

The tracks were followed to Salt Marsh Springs where they left some of their provisions. Before that at another place, a vacated sheep ranch, they left two-thirds of a herd. The officers reached the Fish Springs Mountains, on the trail of the desperadoes, on the east side of the mountains. On Sunday night the party left Fish Springs and met Sheriff Turner and party at three o'clock on Monday morning, January 29th, in a gulch of Antelope Mountain.

We must now detail the proceedings of another pursuing party. On Friday, the 26th, Mr. Thacker, a detective of Wells, Fargo & Co., and Sheriff Turner, met at Provo, on the 4:30 p.m. train, en route for Deseret. There they joined Sheriff John Gillespie, of Tooele County, who had been at that point four days. A consultation was held, they having learned that the supposed robbers were camped in a mountain about fifty miles to the northwest of Deseret, Millard Co. On Saturday morning they called upon Bishop Joseph S. Black, of Deseret, to know if he could furnish the party with a baggage wagon and ten saddle horses. He said he could. Mr. Thacker telegraphed Mr. Dooley, for some long range guns and a field glass. Sheriff Turner telegraphed for deputy Sheriff Thos. Fowler, of Utah Co., to join the party at Deseret prepared to leave that place at 12 o'clock on Saturday last. At 1:30 on Sunday morning the party started. At 4:30 p.m. on the same day, as they were riding across the hills for the purpose of ascertaining the direct route to the stockade of the bandits, supposed to be in the Antelope Mountain, riding across the country they discovered two armed men on horseback, going in the direction of the stockade. On the Sunday morning Sheriff Turner had been unanimously elected commander of the company. On discovering the party two men he beckoned the party pursuing to come up, which they did. They hitched their horses immediately to some cedars, leaving two men to guard them, going after the two robbers to the brow of the hill, about 600 feet high, and a distance of 150 to 175 yards, when the party were in plain view of the two horsemen. Sheriff Turner ordered them to throw up their hands and surrender. Instead of responding Frank Hawley jumped from his horse, shielding himself behind it, and fled at the party with his pistol. The other man, Ormus Nay, who was a little further off and near the center of the gulch, also jumped from his horse, and covered himself in the same way. The officers opening fire on them. At the first volley Nay's horse was shot through the jaw, and it staggered and ran away. The other horse (Hawley's) fell immediately afterwards on its left side on a Winchester rifle, which was in a scabbard and hung on the horn of the saddle. The falling contained on both sides, the bullets cutting the cord over the heads of the officers, several of whom came nearly being shot. One bullet passed between Mr. Thacker and Sheriff Turner. About this time Ormus Nay threw up his hands and apparently surrendered. The firing temporarily ceased. Hawley ran to the opposite side of the hollow and lay down in a small ravine. The party fired several shots in the direction of his ambuscade. Hawley said he was shot and would give up. He was ordered to lay down his arms, but he fired another shot. The party fired again, when he surrendered. Nay also surrendered the party that he was wounded. Sheriff Turner shouted to Nay to notify Hawley to lay down his arms. He said he was so badly wounded he couldn't get to him. The officer said he must. He went in the direction of Hawley and told him to throw down his arms, which he did. On reaching the two men the party found Hawley shot through the left leg. Nay was shot in the right side, the ball ranging upward through the shoulder.

The officers gathered all the available blankets in camp, the baggage wagon being seven miles away, over a rough country. Bishop Black was sent for the wagon, which he brought about 9 o'clock on Sunday evening. The wounds of the robbers were dressed as well as the circumstances would admit, Hawley's leg being put in splints. The men were placed in the four spring wagon, and Bishop Black, Geo. Boyd and Jos. Smith were sent with them to Deseret.

Having no provisions or grain, the party went to a camp of the two Smith boys of Fish Springs, who furnished the party with oats for their horses and something to eat for themselves. This camp was two miles and a half distant. A camp fire was built and at 2:30 on Monday morning the horses were ready to go to the stockade.

At 3 o'clock Captain Deal, Sheriff Brown, Deputy Polk and party were seen riding in the direction of the camp fire. Sheriff Turner stepped out and notified them who the party were, making himself known. Sheriff Brown recognized his voice. He related what had taken place. Capt. Deal's party were making for the same point as Sheriff Turner's was intending to go to. The two parties amalgamated and Sheriff Turner told the newly arrived party his plan. After consultation it was adopted. Sheriff Turner had already procured a guide and they proceeded in combination to the stockade. At daylight (Monday) morning the guide took a note to the stockade, signed by Hawley and Nay, begging the others to surrender, and notifying them that their stockade was surrounded, but that the party did not wish to hurt them. If they would surrender without difficulty, they would not be harmed. Sheriff Turner sent two of his men to get a situation in view of the camp of the bandits, while the guide should enter the cabin where they were. Sheriff Brown and deputy Polk also took a position in full view of the camp. After the guide had been in there from five to ten minutes, Sylvester Earl came out of the cabin and started up the canyon about, got about three rods from the house, when Sheriff Brown called on him to turn back. He obeyed, and as he came opposite the door, Frank Francis and Erastus Anderson also came out. The Sheriff told them to pass on down the canyon, which they did, until they got opposite to where the officers were situated, in view of the cabin. The officers approached them and the three were captured. The men and house were searched by the officers, who took possession of a large quantity of arms.

After the arms were taken and the capture made, Sheriff Turner called Sheriff Brown, Captain Deal and deputy Polk to him, and said: "Gentlemen: We have had the good fortune to get the other two men, but you, gentlemen, have been on the track and following up. I made mention to Mr. Thacker, yesterday, that you were on the track and hunting the bandits and that in case we did have success we would divide the various rewards equally between the two parties. Now, that our party have captured the two, and we have combinedly captured the other three, our boys are quite agreeable to this proposal."

The three bandits who were not wounded were shackled and well guarded, reaching Deseret at 11 o'clock last night. The entire party of robbers were brought on to this city by the officers this morning.

The officers speak commendably of the good service of Bishop Black, who did all that was possible to aid them.

The two wounded men confess to the robbery of Devine's store, at Deep Creek, and the train robbery. Frank Francis is aged 40; Frank Hawley, about 25; Sylvester Earl, 19; E. Anderson, 19, and Ormus Nay is about 22.

The caps worn by the robbers when they perpetrated the train robbery were taken from Devine's store, at Deep Creek. They were ordinary winter caps, known as the Kokilux, with eye and mouth holes, in the part that can be drawn down over the face.

Captain Deal's party traveled 200 miles over a rough country in pursuit of the robbers, enduring a great deal of hardship, the weather a part of the time being intensely cold.

Dr. Benedict to-day made an examination of the wounds of Hawley and Nay. He found that the former had received one shot in the calf of the right leg, making a skin cut about two inches long. Another bullet entered the other leg, on the outside, a little below the knee, ranging down to the right and emerging about four inches above the ankle, passing out under the main bone of the leg. It cut the small bone, destroying about an inch of it. Hawley is from New York State.

Nay has a flesh wound in the thigh. Another bullet entered his back, two inches to the right and on a line with the point of the shoulder blade, ranging up through the joint, lodging near its top, under the skin, from whence Dr. Benedict extracted it. He spat blood for three hours after being shot, and it is therefore probable that the lung is wounded, or the intercostal spaces injured. The bullet shattered the bone of the joint in its passage. The wound is dangerous.

We understand that Captain Deal purposes leaving for Nevada with the prisoners, or at least those in condition to travel, to-morrow.

Too much cannot be said in praise of the valiant officers who effected the capture of the desperadoes.
