

The above nomenclature does not pretend to do more than point out the subjects in reference, which our readers should all take time to inspect for themselves. This is the first exhibition of purely Utah art yet given by the Association, and it is deserving of substantial encouragement. Many of the paintings and pieces of sculpture are the property of well-known citizens, while others are for sale or in the individual possession of the artist.

OUR OGDEN BUDGET.

OGDEN CITY, Utah, May 30, 1884.

Editor Deseret News:

For a number of days past we have been visited each day with successive rainstorms, accompanied by a cold raw atmosphere, which at times rendered an extra coat not only comforting but necessary to comfort. So frequent have been the downfalls and so continuous the threatening clouds, that up to Thursday night it was doubtful whether it would be possible to hold any outdoor service on

MEMORIAL DAY.

A lovely shower of rain fell during the night, but by seven o'clock this morning the sky had cleared somewhat and at nine the column of the Grand Army of the Republic formed on Main Street in front of Castle Hall. These were joined by members of the Ogden fire brigade, the hook and ladder company, members of the Knights of Pythias, other secret societies, the Fourth Ward and

OGDEN CITY BRASS BANDS.

The procession being formed under the command of Asst. Adjt.-General H. C. Wardleigh took up its march along Main street to Second street, thence to Smith street, thence to cemetery. The train was very small compared with some of those of former years.

Having arrived at the burying grounds the procession was halted, formed in a square near and the memorial services were performed. The time consumed in these exercises occupied about one hour, during which the sleepers' resting place was profusely decorated by the flowers of spring which had been woven into beautiful bouquets. The speeches were deferred till to-night.

Hundreds of citizens had assembled to witness the ceremony at the close of which they dispersed over the cemetery to ornament with floral mementoes the places where repose the remains of

THEIR OWN DEAR DEPARTED ONES,

and as I roamed over those grounds, I noticed that very many graves had been cleared of the rank weeds which grew luxuriously upon them. The earth had been trimmed into neat shapes, and the appearance of new mounds which had just been cast up by the digger who

GATHERS THEM IN.

The procession returned to the place from whence it started and was there dismissed.

At two o'clock in the afternoon a large concourse of people assembled at the Ogden Driving Park to witness

THE HORSE RACES.

Besides the prizes awarded to the winners, considerable money changed hands during the proceedings, by which operations some unlucky wights were poorer and some fortunate sports were richer in filthy lucre.

There were several showers before noon, but by 2 o'clock the upper deep had cleared and the sun shone brightly, which afforded much pleasure to those who had gathered to witness the trial of horse-flesh and admire the swift running of the fleet steeds.

TWO ACCIDENTS

occurred during the day, one in the morning, the other in the afternoon. But fortunately neither of them were very serious. The first was to a small boy, son of Mr. Thomas W. Jones. He was run over by a team near the corner of Main and Fourth Streets. His arm and shoulder were bruised and lacerated. No bones broken. The other was to the son of Mr. Wm. Carroll, a boy about 13 years of age. He was riding one of the mares on the race track in a half mile heat when the animal stumbled, fell and rolled over on the rider. When picked up he and the blood was running from his ears. He was at once conveyed to his home and surgical attendance called in. After the examination the doctor said he had received a shock to his nervous system but did not consider there was any cause for alarm, and that with careful nursing the boy would soon be all right again.

At 8 o'clock this evening the Opera House was crowded to its utmost capacity to witness the completion of the memorial services. Both brass bands were present and contributed much to the evening's entertainment. Among the pieces rendered by them were: "Recollections of the War," "Soldiers Dream," "Sweet By and By," "Brilliant Gem," etc. There were also a number of songs and addresses by members of the Grand Army. The first speaker of the evening was

CAPTAIN O. RANSFORD SMITH.

He explained that some of the chief objects of the organization of the order was to keep fresh in the memories the triumph of the army in the late civil war against those who took up arms in rebellion against the Government of the United States. To teach carefulness and how to tenderly remember their dead, and to revere the memories of those noble men who had fought, bled and died for the

and to perpetuate to their children the free institutions of the country. Also to provide for the necessities of the widows of the dead and the indigent living members of the order. He said this post was named after and in honor of the late Secretary of the Navy—John A. Dix, that grand old man who, when asked what he would do in the event of a person attempting to tear down the Flag of our Union from the mast-head of the ship, replied, "Shoot him on the spot." The speaker said the great good that has been accomplished by the members of this post challenges the admiration of all citizens in this place, and he believed they had their support.

REV. A. W. ADKINSON

was the next speaker. He said the organization of this nation and our civil government was an experiment at self-government by the people of America; and their efforts had proved a grand success. He then referred to the severe struggles and the blood and treasure it cost during the eight years of the Revolutionary War to establish the independence of this great nation, which is now so prosperous and free and stable. He next spoke of the four years' civil strife between the North and the South, when the strong forces and the great guns of the foe were arrayed against the government for its overthrow. But the strong arm of right subdued the enemies of the nation and put down the rebellion and established peace, order and obedience to the authorities of the nation. Hence it is no longer a question of self-government with the people, but an established fact. This nation will continue to live, increase in greatness, grandeur and material wealth. There never will be by the the people against this government, for God is with it and will sustain it—and it will endure as long as time shall last. He paid a handsome tribute to the valor and memories of those who were engaged in the late civil strife, and who died that the nation might live, and said hence we come with pride and pleasure to lay the tokens of affection on the soldier's grave on this Memorial day.

ANOTHER REBELLION ATTEMPTED.

REVEREND RICHARD HARTLEY

next addressed the audience. This gentleman said the reasons for assembling this day and listening to the songs, the music, the speeches, etc., were to commemorate the deeds of the illustrious dead who had fought to establish this nation and to perpetuate the freedom and liberties of American citizens who as such are greater than kings. He also spoke of the Southern rebellion, and fully indorsed all the previous speaker had said on the subject. He predicted the future increase, success, and triumph of the nation in all that is great, grand and glorious. He feared no further cruel strife, nor wars with foreign foes. And should the latter desire to attempt it, he threw down the gauntlet in the style of "Lay on, Macduff, and damned be he who first cries hold, enough." He then passed a panegyric on the history, acts and services of General U. S. Grant, and said: "Perish the hand that shall pen a line against that grand, old hero." Such he said were his personal sentiments.

MRS. E. SMITH

Then read a lengthy poem composed for the occasion by Dr. A. S. Condon, and which he inscribed to Gen. Nathan Kimball. The reading occupied twenty minutes.

Appropriate addresses were made by Col. James Hudson, A. B. Taylor, Esq., (on behalf of the City Council of Ogden), Hon. P. H. Emerson, and Post-Commander H. C. Wardleigh. The bands played "Auld Lang Syne," and the proceedings closed at half-past 11 o'clock p.m.

WEBER.

CORRESPONDENCE.

POINTS FROM PAROWAN.

PAROWAN, May 26th, 1884.

Editor Deseret News:

The burden of all the communications from different parts of the Territory that you have published lately has been "high waters," and this place is no exception in that respect. Part of the time this spring we have had seven times our usual quantity of water, and we look for more high water next month. Through the constant watchfulness of our watermaster, Alexander Orton, and our putting in stitches in time, we have got along pretty well so far, though the grist mill company had their works at the head of their long flume (36 yards long) washed out three times in the last six or seven weeks, but we have got them now in better repair than ever. Little Salt Lake is about a mile and a half wide by four or five miles long, and fast growing larger from surplus water that runs into it.

Yesterday morning (Sunday) the people had the pleasure of witnessing the best ever held in Parowan. Nearly thirty pieces were rendered by the children, including songs and choruses, recitations, readings, etc. Questions were put by the Superintendent and answered in concert and with great promptness by the school. The improved and cultivated singing gave great satisfaction. This result is due to the zeal of the superintendents and the labors of Prof. Durham and Brother Lars Mortensen, leaders of the Sunday School Choir. And I might add a growing interest among the people to train their children as the children of Latter-day Saints should be reared. The Superintendent of the School, Brother M. Richards, Jr., stated at the close of the jubilee that he had had charge of the Parowan Sunday School ten years, and that it never before had been in so prosperous a condition as at the present. He gave credit to his assistants Brothers Lars Mortensen and Peter M. Jensen; also all the teachers of the School.

SUNDAY SCHOOL JUBILEE

When Apostles Moses Thatcher and F. M. Lyman held meetings with us three or four weeks ago Brother Thatcher paid a high compliment to our choir by stating that he and testified that they sang with the spirit. Could a higher compliment be paid to any company of sweet singers among the Latter-day Saints than to have an Apostle testify to them that they sang with the spirit. Surely all the sweet singers in Israel should sing with the spirit and with the understanding, for God has said that the song of the heart is as a prayer unto him.

The prospect for an

is all that could be desired, so far, of all kinds of small grain. Our fruit trees are covered with blossom, excepting peach and apricot trees. We have never yet been troubled with the codling moth. This may be accounted for from the fact that some years the frost takes our fruit and perhaps the worms too.

Very respectfully,
WM. C. MCGREGOR.

COLE AND THE ARABS.

W. W. Cole's monster show—circus and menagerie—which are to exhibit in this city on Tuesday and Wednesday June 10th and 11th, are exceptionally interesting in that they present, a perfect wilderness of rare animals, acts and features. Among the foreign novelties to be presented is a troupe of genuine Bedouin Arabs whose performances are marvels of athletic excellence. A "human fly" or lady ceiling walker is another new addition. At least $300,000 has been expended during the winter in obtaining new features and re-fitting this great show. Nearly every race of people, civilized and uncivilized, will be represented. As many as fourteen bare-back running horses will be seen in the ring at one time. An elephant that reads, wrestling camels, and a white hippopotamus are among the many animal curiosities, while Samson the mastodon elephant will tower above anything yet born of brutes. Owing to the extraordinary magnitude of this enormous show, peacocks will be given in the menagerie tents as well as the several rings.
