TERRE-HAUTE, Ind.—The boiler of a saw mill near this city exploded last evening and killed Robert Wilson, proprietor, and another man.

VIRGINIA, Nev., 30.—Last night at 10.45 o'clock, a terrible explosion of nitro-glycerine and giant powder occurred in this city, near the corner of Taylor and B streets, killing ten persons and wounding many others. A large number of persons are missing and probably buried beneath the debris. The explosion, it is supposed, was caused by six cans of nitro-glycerine exploding without apparent cause and the concussion exploding 150 pounds of giant powder, all of which was stored beneath the room of Gen. Van Bokkelen, who was agent in this city for the giant powder. The following buildings were shattered and partly thrown down to the ground: Bank of California and buildings in rear of it, Kennedy & Mallon's grocery store, Douglas building, the upper part used for a lodging house, Daley's saloon and armory hall. The number of persons now known to be killed is ten, among whom are Major General J. L. Van Bokkelen, J. P. Smith, hardware merchant, Wm. Davis, clerk with J. P. Smith, Ben. Mandell, dry goods merchant, Charles H. Knox, of San Francisco, John Devine, Mrs. Emily O'Connor, formerly of the International Hotel in this city, Mrs. Edward Deane and daughter, eight years resident of Gold Hill. The body of General Van Bokkelen was found in a corner of what was his room, his features so bruised and charred as to be hardly recognizable. J. P. Smith, his former clerk, were found in Taylor St., between B & C., about 50 feet from the room occupied by them both. The bodies were covered with the debris of the fallen walls and were not gotten out till this morning. Some of the firemen saw Mr. Knox last night and spoke to him. He asked for water and said, "Boys, its no use, you can't save me." His body, with the exception of his head, was entirely covered by fallen timbers and bricks. John Devine was killed by an iron door, which was hurled a distance of about 100 feet.

A large number of workmen are now engaged in removing the dirt and timbers from the bodies of the remaining seven known to be beneath them, and are working with almost superhuman efforts. Buildings in all directions are shattered, and many narrow escapes were had. Sam Dook and Chas. Higgins were thrown down from their room in the Douglas building to Daley's exchange and were got out with difficulty, both being slightly injured. D. L. Blanchard was thrown from his room to another, several feet distance, yet escaped with slight injury.

Great excitement was caused last night by the screaming of women on the top of Douglas building, which was at the time in flames. They were finally rescued by Capt. Frank Oshiton assisted by firemen.

Another explosion took place this morning at 10:30, in the rear of Kennedy & Mallon's store, but no person was injured.

10:45 a.m.—The body of Chas. H. Ruox, has just been taken from the ruins. It is horribly charred and mangled. The city is all excitement, business is suspended, and all the schools have been dismissed.

The streets are crowded with men, women, and children, ropes are drawn across the street as the walls of the buildings are considered dangerous. The vault of the Bank of California is cracked in several places and their business has been moved to Driscoll & Tritle's banking house.

It is now understood there won't be any celebration on the 4th of July and that the money collected for that purpose will be expended in burying the unfortunate dead, and the remainder distributed among the different fire companies, in the city. The city will go into mourning and flags are now at half mast.

Joseph Sharon, Dan Lyons, Chas. Van Gorder and Senator Hobart, reported killed, are all safe. It is now ascertained that Van Bokkelen stored beneath his room six cans of nitro-glycerine, 150 pounds of giant powder, and 200 pounds of black blasting powder.

The body of Wm. Lowe has just been taken from the ruins, the lower portion of his body only recognizable by his watch.

A German named Greener, while stepping off the cars near Gold Hill depot, fell beneath the train, both legs being cut off near the hips, and was otherwise badly mangled.
